

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

A VENETIAN STORY.

VOL. III.

Rosalind. Farewell, Monsieur Traveller: Look, you lisp, and wear strange suits: disable all the benefits of your own country; be out of love with your Nativity, and almost chide God for making you that countenance you are; or I will scarce think that you have swam in a Gondola.

As You Like It, Act IV. Sc. 1.

Annotation of the Commentators.

That is, been at Venice, which was much visited by the young English gentlemen of those times, and was then what Paris is now—the seat of all dissoluteness. — S. A.*

* [Roger Ascham, Queen Elizabeth's tutor, says, in his "Schoolmaster," — "Although I was only nine days at Venice, I saw, in that little time, more liberty to sin, than ever I heard tell of in the city of London in nine years."]

INTRODUCTION TO BEPPO.

BEPPO was written at Venice, in October, 1817, and acquired great popularity immediately on its publication in the May of the following year. Byron's letters show that he attached very little importance to it at the time. He was not aware that he had opened a new vein, in which his genius was destined to work out some of his brightest triumphs. "I have written," he says to Mr. Murray, "a poem humorous, in or after the excellent manner of Mr. Whistlecraft, and founded on a Venetian anecdote which amused me. It is called Beppo — the short name for Giuseppe, — that is, the Joe of the Italian Joseph. It has politics and ferocity." Again — "Whistlecraft is my immediate model, but Berni is the father of that kind of writing; which, I think, suits our language, too, very well. We shall see by this experiment. It will, at any rate, show that I can write cheerfully, and repel the charge of monotony and mannerism." He wished Mr. Murray to accept of Beppo as a free gift, or, as he chose to express it, "as part of the contract for Canto Fourth of Childe Harold;" adding, however, — "if it pleases, you shall have more in the same mood; for

I know the Italian way of life, and, as for the verse and the passions, I have them still in tolerable vigor."

John Hookham Frere has the merit of having introduced the Bernesque style into our language; but his performance, entitled "Prospectus and Specimen of an intended National Work, by William and Robert Whistlecraft, of Stowmarket, in Suffolk, Harness and Collar Makers, intended to comprise the most interesting Particulars relating to King Arthur and his Round Table," though it delighted all elegant and learned readers, obtained at the time little notice from the public at large, and is already almost forgotten. For the causes of this failure, it appears needless to look further than the last sentence we have been quoting from the letters of the author of the more successful Beppo. Whistlecraft had the verse: it had also the humor, the wit, and even the poetry of the Italian model; but it wanted the life of actual manners, and the strength of stirring passions. Mr. Frere had forgot, or was, with all his genius, to profit by remembering, that the poets, whose unfit style he was adopting, always made their style appear a secondary matter. They never failed to embroider their merriment on the texture of a really interesting story. Byron perceived this; and avoiding his immediate master's one fatal error, and at least equalling him in the excellences which he did display, engaged at once the sympathy of readers of every class, and became substantially the founder of a new species of English poetry.

B E P P O .

I.

'Tis known, at least it should be, that throughout
All countries of the Catholic persuasion,
Some weeks before Shrove Tuesday comes about,
The people take their fill of recreation,
And buy repentance, ere they grow devout,
However high their rank, or low their station,
With fiddling, feasting, dancing, drinking, masquing,
And other things which may be had for asking.

II.

The moment night with dusky mantle covers
The skies (and the more duskily the better),
The time less liked by husbands than by lovers
Begins, and prudery flings aside her fetter ;
And gaiety on restless tiptoe hovers,
Giggling with all the gallants who beset her ;
And there are songs and quavers, roaring, humming,
Guitars, and every other sort of strumming.

III.

And there are dresses splendid, but fantastical,
Masks of all times and nations, Turks and Jews,
And harlequins and clowns, with feats gymnastical,
Greeks, Romans, Yankee-doodles, and Hindoos ;
All kinds of dress, except the ecclesiastical,
All people, as their fancies hit, may choose,
But no one in these parts may quiz the clergy, —
Therefore take heed, ye Freethinkers ! I charge ye.

IV.

You'd better walk about begirt with briars,
Instead of coat and smallclothes, than put on
A single stitch reflecting upon friars,
Although you swore it only was in fun ;
They'd haul you o'er the coals, and stir the fires
Of Phlegethon with every mother's son,
Nor say one mass to cool the caldron's bubble
That boiled your bones, unless you paid them double.

V.

But saving this, you may put on whate'er
You like by way of doublet, cape, or cloak,
Such as in Monmouth-street, or in Rag Fair,
Would rig you out in seriousness or joke ;
And even in Italy such places are,
With prettier name in softer accents spoke,
For, bating Covent Garden, I can hit on
No place that's called " Piazza " in Great Britain.

VI.

This feast is named the Carnival,* which being Interpreted, implies "farewell to flesh :"
So called, because the name and thing agreeing,
Through Lent they live on fish both salt and fresh.

But why they usher Lent with so much glee in,
Is more than I can tell, although I guess
'Tis as we take a glass with friends at parting,
In the stage-coach or packet, just at starting.

VII.

And thus they bid farewell to carnal dishes,
And solid meats, and highly spiced ragouts,
To live for forty days on ill-dressed fishes,
Because they have no sauces to their stews,
A thing which causes many "poohs" and "pishes,"
And several oaths (which would not suit the Muse),
From travellers accustomed from a boy
To eat their salmon, at the least, with soy ;

* ["The Carnival," says Mr. Rose, "though it is gayer or duller, according to the genius of the nations which celebrate it, is, in its general character, nearly the same all over the peninsula. The beginning is like any other season; towards the middle you begin to meet masques and murmurs in sunshine: in the last fifteen days the plot thickens; and during the three last all is hurly-burly. The shops are shut, all business is at a stand, and the drunken cries heard at night afford a clear proof of the pleasures to which these days of leisure are dedicated." — Letters from the North of Italy.]

VIII.

And therefore humbly I would recommend
 "The curious in fish-sauce," before they cross
 The sea, to bid their cook, or wife, or friend,
 Walk or ride to the Strand, and buy in gross
 (Or if set out beforehand, these may send
 By any means least liable to loss),
 Ketchup, Soy, Chili-vinegar, and Harvey,
 Or, by the Lord! a Lent will well nigh starve ye;

IX.

That is to say, if your religion's Roman,
 And you at Rome would do as Romans do,
 According to the proverb, — although no man,
 If foreign, is obliged to fast; and you,
 If Protestant, or sickly, or a woman,
 Would rather dine in sin on a ragout —
 Dine and be d—d! I don't mean to be coarse,
 But that's the penalty, to say no worse.

X.

Of all the places where the Carnival
 Was most facetious in the days of yore,
 For dance, and song, and serenade, and ball,
 And masque, and mime, and mystery, and more
 Than I have time to tell now, or at all,
 Venice the bell from every city bore, —
 And at the moment when I fix my story,
 That sea-born city was in all her glory.

XI.

They've pretty faces yet, those same Venetians,
 Black eyes, arched brows, and sweet expressions still ;
 Such as of old were copied from the Grecians,
 In ancient arts by moderns mimicked ill ;
 And like so many Venuses of Titian's
 (The best's at Florence * — see it, if ye will,)
 They look when leaning over the balcony,
 Or stepped from out a picture by Giorgione,†

XII.

Whose tints are truth and beauty at their best ;
 And when you to Manfrini's palace go, ‡

* ["At Florence I remained but a day, having a hurry for Rome. However, I went to the two galleries, from which one returns drunk with beauty ; but there are sculpture and painting, which, for the first time, gave me an idea of what people mean by their cant, about those two most artificial of the arts. What struck me most were, — the mistress of Raphael, a portrait ; the mistress of Titian, a portrait ; a Venus of Titian, in the Medici gallery — the Venus ; Canova's Venus, also in the other gallery," etc. — Byron's Letters, 1817.]

† ["I know nothing of pictures myself, and care almost as little ; but to me there are none like the Venetian — above all, Giorgione. I remember well his judgment of Solomon, in the Mariscalchi gallery in Bologna. The real mother is beautiful, exquisitely beautiful." — Byron's Letters, 1820.]

‡ [The following is Byron's account of his visit to this palace, in April, 1817. — "To-day, I have been over the Manfrini palace, famous for its pictures. What struck most in the general collection, was the extreme resemblance of the style of the female faces in the mass of pictures, so many centuries or generations

That picture (howsoever fine the rest)
 Is loveliest to my mind of all the show ;
 It may perhaps be also to your zest,
 And that's the cause I rhyme upon it so :
 'Tis but a portrait of his son, and wife,
 And self; but such a woman ! love in life !

XIII.

Love in full life and length, not love ideal,
 No, nor ideal beauty, that fine name,
 But something better still, so very real,
 That the sweet model must have been the same ;
 A thing that you would purchase, beg, or steal,
 Wer't not impossible, besides a shame :
 The face recalls some face, as 'twere with pain,
 You once have seen, but ne'er will see again ;

XIV.

One of those forms which flit by us, when we Are young, and fix our eyes on every face ;

old, to those you see and meet every day among the existing Italians. The Queen of Cyprus and Giorgione's wife,* particularly the latter, are Venetians as it were of yesterday; the same eyes and expression, and, to my mind, there is none finer. You must recollect, however, that I know nothing of painting, and that I detest it, unless it reminds me of something I have seen, or think it possible to see."]

* [This appears to be an incorrect description of the picture ; as, according to Vasari and others, Giorgione never was married, and died young.]

And, oh! the loveliness at times we see
In momentary gliding, the soft grace,
The youth, the bloom, the beauty which agree,
In many a nameless being we retrace,
Whose course and home we knew not, nor shall know,
Like the lost Pleiad * seen no more below.

XV.

I said that like a picture by Giorgione
Venetian women were, and so they are,
Particularly seen from a balcony,
(For beauty's sometimes best set off afar)
And there, just like a heroine of Goldoni,
They peep from out the blind, or o'er the bar;
And truth to say, they're mostly very pretty,
And rather like to show it, more's the pity!

XVI.

For glances beget ogles, ogles sighs,
Sighs wishes, wishes words, and words a letter,
Which flies on wings of light-heeled Mercuries,
Who do such things because they know no better
And then, God knows, what mischief may arise,
When love links two young people in one fetter,
Vile assignations, and adulterous beds,
Elopements, broken vows, and hearts, and heads.

* "Quæ septem dici sex tamen esse solent." — OVID.

XVII.

Shakspeare described the sex in Desdemona

As very fair, but yet suspect in fame,*

And to this day from Venice to Verona

Such matters may be probably the same,

Except that since those times was never known a

Husband whom mere suspicion could inflame

To suffocate a wife no more than twenty,

Because she had a "cavalier servente."

XVIII.

Their jealousy (if they are ever jealous)

Is of a fair complexion altogether,

Not like that sooty devil of Othello's

Which smothers women in a bed of feather,

But worthier of these much more jolly fellows,

When weary of the matrimonial tether

His head for such a wife no mortal bothers,

But takes at once another, or another's.†

XIX.

Didst ever see a Gondola? For fear

You should not, I'll describe it you exactly:

* ["Look to't:

In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks

They dare not show their husbands; their best conscience

Is — not to leave undone, but keep unknown." — Othello.]

† ["Jealousy is not the order of the day in Venice, and daggers are out of fashion, while duels on love matters are unknown — at least, with the husbands." — Byron's Letters.]

'Tis a long covered boat that's common here,
Carved at the prow, built lightly, but compactly,
Rowed by two rowers, each called "Gondolier,"
It glides along the water looking blackly,
Just like a coffin clapt in a canoe,
Where none can make out what you say or do.

XX.

And up and down the long canals they go,
And under the Rialto * shoot along,
By night and day, all paces, swift or slow,
And round the theatres, a sable throng,
They wait in their dusk livery of woe,—
But not to them do woful things belong,
For sometimes they contain a deal of fun,
Like mourning coaches when the funeral's done.

XXI.

But to my story. — 'T was some years ago,
It may be thirty, forty, more or less,
The carnival was at its height, and so
Were all kinds of buffoonery and dress ;

* [An English abbreviation. Rialto is the name, not of the bridge, but of the island from which it is called; and the Venetians say, il ponte di Rialto, as we say Westminster Bridge. In that island is the Exchange. It was there that the Christian held discourse with the Jew; and Shylock refers to it, when he says,

"Signor Antonio, many a time and oft,
In the Rialto, you have rated me."—ROCKS.]

A certain lady went to see the show,
Her real name I know not, nor can guess,
And so we'll call her Laura, if you please,
Because it slips into my verse with ease.

XXII.

She was not old, nor young, nor at the years
Which certain people call a "certain age,"
Which yet the most uncertain age appears,
Because I never heard, nor could engage
A person yet by prayers, or bribes, or tears,
To name, define by speech, or write on page,
The period meant precisely by that word, —
Which surely is exceedingly absurd.

XXIII.

Laura was blooming still, had made the best
Of time, and time returned the compliment,
And treated her genteelly, so that, dressed,
She looked extremely well where'er she went;
A pretty woman is a welcome guest,
And Laura's brow a frown had rarely bent,
Indeed she shone all smiles, and seemed to flatter
Mankind with her black eyes for looking at her.

XXIV.

She was a married woman; 'tis convenient,
Because in Christian countries 'tis a rule
To view their little slips with eyes more lenient;
Whereas if single ladies play the fool,

(Unless within the period intervenient
A well-timed wedding makes the scandal cool)
I don't know how they ever can get over it,
Except they manage never to discover it.

XXV.

Her husband sailed upon the Adriatic,
And made some voyages, too, in other seas,
And when he lay in quarantine for pratique
(A forty days' precaution 'gainst disease),
His wife would mount, at times, her highest attic,
For thence she could discern the ship with ease:
He was a merchant trading to Aleppo,
His name Giuseppe, called more briefly, Beppo.

XXVI.

He was a man as dusky as a Spaniard,
Sunburnt with travel, yet a portly figure ;
Though colored, as it were, within a tanyard,
He was a person both of sense and vigor —
A better seaman never yet did man yard :
And she, although her manners showed no rigor,
Was deemed a woman of the strictest principle,
So much as to be thought almost invincible.

XXVII.

But several years elapsed since they had met ;
Some people thought the ship was lost, and some
That he had somehow blundered into debt,
And did not like the thought of steering home ;

And there were several offered any bet,
 Or that he would, or that he would not come,
 For most men (till by losing rendered sager)
 Will back their own opinions with a wager.

XXVIII.

'Tis said that their last parting was pathetic,
 As partings often are, or ought to be,
 And their presentiment was quite prophetic
 That they should never more each other see,
 (A sort of morbid feeling, half poetic,
 Which I have known occur in two or three,)
 When kneeling on the shore upon her sad knee,
 He left this Adriatic Ariadne.

XXIX.

And Laura waited long, and wept a little,
 And thought of wearing weeds, as well she might;
 She almost lost all appetite for victual,
 And could not sleep with ease alone at night;
 She deemed the window-frames and shutters brittle
 Against a daring housebreaker or sprite,
 And so she thought it prudent to connect her
 With a vice-husband, chiefly to protect her.

XXX.

She chose, (and what is there they will not choose,
 If only you will but oppose their choice?)
 Till Beppo should return from his long cruise,
 And bid once more her faithful heart rejoice,

A man some women like, and yet abuse —
 A coxcomb was he by the public voice;
 A Count of wealth, they said, as well as quality,
 And in his pleasures of great liberality.*

XXXI.

And then he was a Count, and then he knew
 Music, and dancing, fiddling, French and Tuscan;
 The last not easy, be it known to you,
 For few Italians speak the right Etruscan.
 He was a critic upon operas, too,
 And knew all niceties of the sock and buskin;
 And no Venetian audience could endure a
 Song, scene, or air, when he cried "seccatura!"

XXXII.

His "bravo" was decisive, for that sound
 Hushed "Academie" sighed in silent awe;
 The fiddlers trembled as he looked around,
 For fear of some false note's detected flaw.
 The "prima donna's" tuneful heart would bound,
 Dreading the deep damnation of his "bah!"
 Soprano, basso, even the contra-alto,
 Wished him five fathom under the Rialto.

XXXIII.

He patronized the Improvisatori,
 Nay, could himself extemporize some stanzas,

* [MS. — "A Count of wealth inferior to his quality,
 Which somewhat limited his liberality."

Wrote rhymes; sang songs, could also tell a story,
Sold pictures, and was skilful in the dance as Italians can be, though in this their glory [has;
Must surely yield the palm to that which France
In short, he was a perfect cavaliero,
And to his very valet seemed a hero.

XXXIV.

Then he was faithful too, as well as amorous;
So that no sort of female could complain,
Although they're now and then a little clamorous,
He never put the pretty souls in pain;
His heart was one of those which most enamour us,
Wax to receive, and marble to retain.
He was a lover of the good old school.
Who still become more constant as they cool.

XXXV.

No wonder such accomplishments should turn
A female head, however sage and steady —
With scarce a hope that Beppo could return,
In law he was almost as good as dead, he
Nor sent, nor wrote, nor showed the least concern,
And she had waited several years already;
And really if a man won't let us know
That he's alive, he's dead, or should be so.

XXXVI.

Besides, within the Alps, to every woman,
(Although, God knows, it is a grievous sin,)

"T is, I may say, permitted to have two men ;
 I can't tell who first brought the custom in,
 But " Cavalier Serventes " are quite common,
 And no one notices nor cares a pin ;
 And we may call this (not to say the worst)
 A second marriage which corrupts the first.

XXXVII.

The word was formerly a " Cicisbeo,"
 But that is now grown vulgar and indecent ;
 The Spaniards call the person a "Cortejo," *
 For the same mode subsists in Spain, though recent ;
 In short it reaches from the Po to Teio,
 And may perhaps at last be o'er the sea sent.
 But Heaven preserve Old England from such courses !
 Or what becomes of damage and divorces ?

XXXVIII.

However, I still think, with all due deference
 To the fair single part of the Creation,
 That married ladies should preserve the preference
 In tête-à-tête or general conversation —
 And this I say without peculiar reference
 To England, France, or any other nation —
 Because they know the world, and are at ease,
 And being natural, naturally please.

* Cortejo is pronounced Cortejo, with an aspirate, according to the Arabesque guttural. It means what there is as yet no precise name for in England, though the practice is as common as in any tramontane country whatever.

XXXIX.

'Tis true your budding Miss is very charming,
But shy and awkward at first coming out,
So much alarmed, that she is quite alarming,
All Giggle, Blush; half Pertness, and half Pout;
And glancing at Mamma, for fear there's harm in
What you, she, it, or they, may be about,
The Nursery still lisps out in all they utter —
Besides, they always smell of bread and butter.

XL.

But "Cavalier Servente" is the phrase
Used in politest circles to express
This supernumerary slave, who stays
Close to the lady as a part of dress,
Her word the only law which he obeys.
He is no sinecure, as you may guess;
Coach, servants, gondola, he goes to call,
And carries fan and tippet, gloves and shawl.

XLI.

With all its sinful doings, I must say,
That Italy's a pleasant place to me,
Who love to see the Sun shine every day,
And vines (not nailed to walls) from tree to tree
Festooned, much like the back scene of a play,
Or melodrama which people flock to see,
When the first act is ended by a dance
In vineyards copied from the south of France.

XLII.

I like on Autumn evenings to ride out,
Without being forced to bid my groom be sure
My cloak is round his middle strapped about,
Because the skies are not the most secure ;
I know too that, if stopped upon my rout,
Where the green alleys windingly allure,
Reeling with grapes red wagons choke the way,—
In England 't would be dung, dust, or a dray.

XLIII.

I also like to dine on becaficas,
To see the Sun set, sure he'll rise to-morrow,
Not through a misty morning twinkling weak as
A drunken man's dead eye in maudlin sorrow,
But with all Heaven t' himself; that day will break as Beauteous as cloudless, nor be forced to borrow
That sort of farthing.candlelight which glimmers
While reeking London's smoky caldron simmers.

XLIV.

I love the language, that soft bastard Latin,
Which melts like kisses from a female mouth,
And sounds as if it should be writ on satin,
With syllables which breathe of the sweet South,
And gentle liquids gliding all so pat in,
That not a single accent seems uncouth,
Like our harsh northern whistling, grunting guttural,
Which we're obliged to hiss, and spit, and sputter all.

XLV.

I like the women too (forgive my folly),
 From the rich peasant cheek of ruddy bronze,*
 And large black eyes that flash on you a volley
 Of rays that say a thousand things at once,
 To the high dama's brow, more melancholy,
 But clear, and with a wild and liquid glance,
 Heart on her lips, and soul within her eyes,
 Soft as her clime,† and sunny as her skies.

XLVI.

Eve of the land which still is Paradise !
 Italian beauty ! didst thou not inspire
 Raphael, ‡ who died in thy embrace, and vies
 With all we know of Heaven, or can desire,
 In what he hath bequeathed us ? — in what guise,
 Though flashing from the fervor of the lyre,
 Would words describe thy past and present glow,
 While yet Canova can create below ? §

* [MS. — "From the tall peasant with her ruddy bronze."]

† [MS. — "Like her own clime, all sun, and bloom, and skies."]

‡ For the received accounts of the cause of Raphael's death, see his lives.

§ (In talking thus, the writer, more especially
 Of women, would be understood to say,
 He speaks as a spectator, not officially,
 And always, reader, in a modest way;
 Perhaps, too, in no very great degree shall he Appear to have offended in this lay,
 Since, as all know, without the sex, our sonnets
 Would seem unfinished, like their untrimmed bonnets.)

(Signed) PRINTER'S DEVIL.

XLVII.

"England ! with all thy faults I love thee still,"
I said at Calais, and have not forgot it ;
I like to speak and lucubrate my fill ;
I like the government (but that is not it) ;
I like the freedom of the press and quill ;
I like the Habeas Corpus (when we've got it) ;
I like a parliamentary debate,
Particularly when 't is not too late ;

XLVIII.

I like the taxes, when they're not too many ;
I like a sea-coal fire, when not too dear ;
I like a beef-steak, too, as well as any ;
Have no objection to a pot of beer ;
I like the weather, when it is not rainy,
That is, I like two months of every year. ✓
And so God save the Regent, Church, and King !
Which means that I like all and every thing.

XLIX.

Our standing army, and disbanded seamen,
Poor's rate, Reform, my own, the nation's debt,
Our little riots just to show we are free men,
Our trifling bankruptcies in the Gazette,
Our cloudy climate, and our chilly women,
All these I can forgive, and those forget,
And greatly venerate our recent glories,
And wish they were not owing to the Tories.

L.

But to my tale of Laura, — for I find
Digression is a sin, that by degrees
Becomes exceeding tedious to the mind,
And, therefore, may the reader too displease —
The gentle reader, who may wax unkind,
And caring little for the author's ease,
Insist on knowing what he means, a hard
And hapless situation for a bard.

LI.

Oh that I had the art of easy writing
What should be easy reading! could I scale
Parnassus, where the Muses sit inditing
Those pretty poems never known to fail,
How quickly would I print (the world delighting)
A Grecian, Syrian, or Assyrian tale;
And sell you, mixed with western sentimentalism,
Some samples of the finest Orientalism.

LII.

But I am but a nameless sort of person,
(A broken Dandy lately on my travels)
And take for rhyme, to hook my rambling verse on,
The first that Walker's Lexicon unravels,
And when I can't find that, I put a worse on,
Not caring as I ought for critics' cavils;
I've half a mind to tumble down to prose,
But verse is more in fashion — so here goes.

LIII.

The Count and Laura made their new arrangement,
Which lasted, as arrangements sometimes do,
For half a dozen years without estrangement ;
They had their little differences, too ;
Those jealous whiffs, which never any change meant ;
In such affairs there probably are few
Who have not had this pouting sort of squabble,
From sinners of high station to the rabble.

LIV.

But on the whole, they were a happy pair,
As happy as unlawful love could make them ;
The gentleman was fond, the lady fair,
Their chains so slight, 't was not worth while to break them :
The world beheld them with indulgent air ;
The pious only wished "the devil take them !"
He took them not ; he very often waits,
And leaves old sinners to be young ones' baits.

LV.

But they were young : Oh ! what without our youth
Would love be ! What would youth be without love !
Youth lends it joy, and sweetness, vigor, truth,
Heart, soul, and all that seems as from above ;
But, languishing with years, it grows uncouth —
One of few things experience don't improve,

Which is, perhaps, the reason why old fellows
Are always so preposterously jealous.

LVI.

It was the Carnival, as I have said
Some six and thirty stanzas back, and so
Laura the usual preparations made,
Which you do when your mind's made up to go
To-night to Mrs. Boehm's masquerade,
Spectator, or partaker in the show ;
The only difference known between the cases
Is — here, we have six weeks of "varnished faces."

LVII.

Laura, when dressed, was (as I sang before)
A pretty woman as was ever seen,
Fresh as the Angel o'er a new inn door,
Or frontispiece of a new Magazine,
With all the fashions which the last month wore,
Colored, and silver paper leaved between
That and the title-page, for fear the press
Should soil with parts of speech the parts of dress.

LVIII.

They went to the Ridotto ; — 't is a hall
Where people dance, and sup, and dance again ;
Its proper name, perhaps, were a masqued ball,
But that's of no importance to my strain ;
'Tis (on a smaller scale) like our Vauxhall,
Excepting that it can't be spoilt by rain :

The company is "mixed," (the phrase I quote is
As much as saying, they're below your notice);

LIX.

For a "mixed company" implies that, save
Yourself and friends, and half a hundred more,
Whom you may bow to without looking grave,
The rest are but a vulgar set, the bore
Of public places, where they basely brave
The fashionable stare of twenty score
Of well-bred persons, called "the World;" but I,
Although I know them, really don't know why

LX.

This is the case in England; at least was During the dynasty of Dandies,* now
Perchance succeeded by some other class
Of imitated imitators: — how Irreparably soon decline, alas!
The demagogues of fashion: all below
Is frail; how easily the world is lost
By love, or war, and now and then by frost!

* ["I liked the Dandies: they were always very civil to me; though, in general, they disliked literary people, and persecuted and mystified Madame De Stael, Lewis, Horace Twiss, and the like. The truth is, that though I gave up the business early, I had a tinge of Dandyism in my minority, and probably retained enough of it to conciliate the great ones, at four and twenty." — Byron's Diary, 1821.]

LXI.

Crushed was Napoleon by the northern Thor,
 Who knocked his army down with icy hammer,
 Stopped by the elements,* like a whaler, or
 A blundering novice in his new French grammar ;
 Good cause had he to doubt the chance of war,
 And as for Fortune — but I dare not d—n her
 Because, were I to ponder to infinity,
 The more I should believe in her divinity. †

LXII.

She rules the present, past, and all to be yet,
 She gives us luck in lotteries, love, and marriage ;
 I cannot say that she's done much for me yet ;
 Not that I mean her bounties to disparage,
 We've not yet closed accounts, and we shall see yet
 How much she'll make amends for past miscarriage ;

* [" When Brummell was obliged to retire to France, he knew no French, and having obtained a grammar for the purpose of study, our friend Scrope Davies was asked what progress Brummell had made in French: he responded, 'that Brummell had been stopped, like Bonaparte in Russia, by the elements.' I have put this pun into Beppo, which is 'a fair exchange and no robbery;' for Scrope made his fortune at several dinners (as he owned himself), by repeating occasionally, as his own, some of the buffooneries with which I had encountered him in the morning." — Byron's Diary, 1821.]

† [" Like Sylla, I have always believed that all things depend upon Fortune, and nothing upon ourselves. I am not aware of any one thought or action, worthy of being called good to myself or others, which is not to be attributed to the good goddess — Fortune! " — Byron's Diary, 1821.]

Meantime the goddess I'll no more importune,
Unless to thank her when she's made my fortune.

LXIII.

To turn, — and to return ; — the devil take it !
This story slips forever through my fingers,
Because, just as the stanza likes to make it,
It needs must be — and so it rather lingers ;
This form of verse began, I can't well break it,
But must keep time and tune like public singers ;
But if I once get through my present measure,
I'll take another when I'm next at leisure.

LXIV.

They went to the Ridotto ('tis a place
To which I mean to go myself to-morrow,*
Just to divert my thoughts a little space,
Because I'm rather hippish, and may borrow
Some spirits, guessing at what kind of face
May lurk beneath each mask ; and as my sorrow
Slackens its pace sometimes, I'll make, or find, Something shall leave it half an hour behind.)

LXV.

Now Laura moves along the joyous crowd,
Smiles in her eyes, and simpers on her lips ;

* [In the margin of the original MS. Byron has written —
"January 19th, 1818. To-morrow will be a Sunday, and full Ridotto."]

To some she whispers, other speaks aloud ;
To some she curtsies, and to some she dips,
Complains of warmth, and this complaint avowed,
Her lover brings the lemonade, she sips ;
She then surveys, condemns, but pities still
Her dearest friends for being dressed so ill.

LXVI.

One has false curls, another too much paint,
A third — where did she buy that frightful turban ?
A fourth's so pale she fears she's going to faint,
A fifth's look's vulgar, dowdyish, and suburban,
A sixth's white silk has got a yellow taint,
A seventh's thin muslin surely will be her bane,
And lo ! an eighth appears, — " I'll see no more !"
For fear, like Banquo's kings, they reach a score.

LXVII.

Meantime, while she was thus at others gazing,
Others were levelling their looks at her ;
She heard the men's half-whispered mode of praising,
And, till 't was done, determined not to stir ;
The women only thought it quite amazing
That, at her time of life, so many were
Admirers still, — but men are so debased,
Those brazen creatures always suit their taste.

LXVIII.

For my part, now, I ne'er could understand
Why naughty women — but I won't discuss

A thing which is a scandal to the land,
I only don't see why it should be thus ;
And if I were but in a gown and band,
Just to entitle me to make a fuss,
I'd preach on this till Wilberforce and Romilly
Should quote in their next speeches from my homily.

LXIX.

While Laura thus was seen and seeing, smiling,
Talking, she knew not why and cared not what,
So that her female friends, with envy broiling,
Beheld her airs and triumph, and all that ;
And well-dressed males still kept before her filing,
And passing bowed and mingled with her chat ;
More than the rest one person seemed to stare
With pertinacity that's rather rare.

LXX.

He was a Turk, the color of mahogany ;
And Laura saw him, and at first was glad,
Because the Turks so much admire philogyny,
Although their usage of their wives is sad ;
'Tis said they use no better than a dog any
Poor woman, whom they purchase like a pad :
They have a number, though they ne'er exhibit 'em,
Four wives by law, and concubines "ad libitum."

LXXI.

They lock them up, and veil, and guard them daily,
They scarcely can behold their male relations,

So that their moments do not pass so gaily
 As is supposed the case with northern nations ;
 Confinement, too, must make them look quite palely :
 And as the Turks abhor long conversations,
 Their days are either passed in doing nothing,
 Or bathing, nursing, making love, and clothing.

LXXII.

They cannot read, and so don't lisp in criticism ;
 Nor write, and so they don't affect the muse ;
 Were never caught in epigram or witticism,
 Have no romances, sermons, plays, reviews, —
 In harems learning soon would make a pretty schism !
 But luckily these beauties are no " Blues,"
 No bustling Botherbys have they to show 'em
 " That charming passage in the last new poem."

LXXIII.

No solemn, antique gentleman of rhyme,
 Who having angled all his life for fame,
 And getting but a nibble at a time,
 Still fussily keeps fishing on, the same
 Small " Triton of the minnows," the sublime
 Of mediocrity, the furious tame,
 The echos' echo, usher of the school
 Of female wits, boy bards — in short, a fool !

LXXIV.

A stalking oracle of awful phrase, [law]
 The approving " Good !" (by no means GOOD in

Humming like flies around the newest blaze,
 The bluest of bluebottles you e'er saw,
 Teasing with blame, excruciating with praise,
 Gorging the little fame he gets all raw,
 Translating tongues he knows not even by letter,
 And sweating plays so middling, bad were better.

LXXV.

One hates an author that's all author, fellows
 In foolscap uniforms turned up with ink,
 So very anxious, clever, fine, and jealous,
 One don't know what to say to them, or think,
 Unless to puff them with a pair of bellows ;
 Of coxcombry's worst coxcombs e'en the pink
 Are preferable to these shreds of paper,
 These unquenched snuffings of the midnight taper.

LXXVI.

Of these same we see several, and of others,
 Men of the world, who know the world like men,
 Scott, Rogers, Moore, and all the better brothers,
 Who think of something else besides the pen ;
 But for the children of the "mighty mother's,"
 The would-be wits and can't-be gentlemen
 I leave them to their daily "tea is ready,"
 Smug coterie, and literary lady.

LXXVII.

The poor dear Mussulwomen whom I mention
 Have none of these instructive pleasant people,
 VOL. III. 3

And one would seem to them a new invention,
 Unknown as bells within a Turkish steeple ;
 I think 't would almost be worth while to pension
 (Though best-sown projects very often reap ill)
 A missionary author, just to preach
 Our Christian usage of the parts of speech.

LXXVIII.

No chemistry for them unfolds her gasses,
 No metaphysics are let loose in lectures,
 No circulating library amasses
 Religious novels, moral tales, and strictures
 Upon the living manners, as they pass us ;
 No exhibition glares with annual pictures ;
 They stare not on the stars from out their attics,
 Nor deal (thank God for that !) in mathematics.

LXXIX.

Why I thank God for that is no great matter,
 I have my reasons, you no doubt suppose,
 And as, perhaps, they would not highly flatter,
 I'll keep them for my life (to come) in prose ;
 I fear I have a little turn for satire,
 And yet methinks the older that one grows
 Inclines us more to laugh than scold, though laughter
 Leaves us so doubly serious shortly after.

LXXX.

Oh, Mirth and Innocence ! Oh, Milk and Water !
 Ye happy mixtures of more happy days !

In these sad centuries of sin and slaughter,
Abominable Man no more allays
His thirst with such pure beverage. No matter,
I love you both, and both shall have my praise.
Oh, for old Saturn's reign of sugar-candy !—
Meantime I drink to your return in brandy.

LXXXI.

Our Laura's Turk still kept his eyes upon her,
Less in the Mussulman than Christian way,
Which seems to say, "Madam, I do you honor,
"And while I please to stare, you'll please to stay :"
Could staring win a woman, this had won her,
But Laura could not thus be led astray ;
She had stood fire too long and well, to boggle
Even at this stranger's most outlandish ogle.

LXXXII.

The morning now was on the point of breaking,
A turn of time at which I would advise
Ladies who have been dancing, or partaking
In any other kind of exercise,
To make their preparations for forsaking
The ball-room ere the sun begins to rise,
Because when once the lamps and candles fail,
His blushes make them look a little pale.

LXXXIII.

I've seen some balls and revels in my time,
And stayed them over for some silly reason,
And then I looked (I hope it was no crime)
To see what lady best stood out the season ;
And though I've seen some thousands in their prime,
Lovely and pleasing, and who still may please on,
I never saw but one (the stars withdrawn),
Whose bloom could after dancing dare the dawn.

LXXXIV.

The name of this Aurora I'll not mention,
Although I might, for she was nought to me
More than that patent work of God's invention,
A charming woman, whom we like to see ;
But writing names would merit reprehension,
Yet if you like to find out this fair she,
At the next London or Parisian ball
You still may mark her cheek, out-blooming all.

LXXXV.

Laura, who knew it would not do at all
To meet the daylight after seven hours' sitting
Among three thousand people at a ball,
To make her curtsy thought it right and fitting ;
The Count was at her elbow with her shawl,
And they the room were on the point of quitting,
When lo ! those cursed gondoliers had got
Just in the very place where they should not.

LXXXVI.

In this they're like our coachmen, and the cause
Is much the same—the crowd, and pulling, hauling,
With blasphemies enough to break their jaws,
They make a never intermitting bawling.
At home, our Bow-street gemmen keep the laws,
And here a sentry stands within your calling;
But for all that, there is a deal of swearing,
And nauseous words past mentioning or bearing.

LXXXVII.

The Count and Laura found their boat at last,
And homeward floated o'er the silent tide,
Discussing all the dances gone and past;
The dancers and their dresses, too, beside;
Some little scandals eke: but all aghast
(As to their palace stairs the rowers glide)
Sate Laura by the side of her Adorer,*
When lo! the Mussulman was there before her.

LXXXVIII.

"Sir," said the Count, with brow exceeding grave,
"Your unexpected presence here will make
"It necessary for myself to crave
"Its import? But perhaps 'tis a mistake;
"I hope it is so; and at once to wave
"All compliment, I hope so for your sake;

* [MS. — "Sate Laura with a kind of comic horror."]

"You understand my meaning, or you shall."

"Sir," (quoth the Turk) "'tis no mistake at all.

LXXXIX.

"That lady is my wife!" Much wonder paints

The lady's changing cheek, as well it might;

But where an Englishwoman sometimes faints,

Italian females don't do so outright;

They only call a little on their saints,

And then come to themselves, almost or quite;

Which saves much hartshorn, salts, and sprinkling faces,

And cutting stays, as usual in such cases.

The lady's cheek is changing at a moment's notice.

XC.

She said, — what could she say? Why, not a word:

But the Count courteously invited in

The stranger, much appeased by what he heard:

"Such things, perhaps, we'd best discuss within,"

Said he; "don't let us make ourselves absurd

"In public, by a scene, nor raise a din,

For then the chief and only satisfaction

Will be much quizzing on the whole transaction."

XCI.

They entered, and for coffee called — it came,

A beverage for Turks and Christians both,

Although the way they make it's not the same

Now Laura, much recovered, or less loth

To speak, cries "Beppo ! what's your pagan name ?

Bless me ! your beard is of amazing growth !

And how came you to keep away so long ?

Are you not sensible 't was very wrong ?

XCII.

And are you really, truly, now a Turk ?

With any other women did you wive ?

Is't true they use their fingers for a fork ?

Well, that's the prettiest shawl — as I'm alive !

You'll give it me ? They say you eat no pork.

And how so many years did you contrive

To — Bless me ! did I ever ? No, I never Saw a man grown so yellow ! How's your liver ?

XCIII.

Beppo ! that beard of yours becomes you not ;

It shall be shaved before you're a day older :

Why do you wear it ? Oh ! I had forgot —

Pray don't you think the weather here is colder ?

How do I look ? You shan't stir from this spot

In that queer dress, for fear that some beholder

Should find you out, and make the story known.

How short your hair is ! Lord ! how gray it's grown !"

XCIV.

What answer Beppo made to these demands

Is more than I know. He was cast away

About where Troy stood once, and nothing stands,

Became a slave of course, and for his pay

Had bread and bastinadoes, till some bands
Of pirates landing in a neighboring bay,
He joined the rogues and prospered, and became
A renegade of indifferent fame.

XCV.

But he grew rich, and with his riches grew so
Keen the desire to see his home again,
He thought himself in duty bound to do so,
And not be always thieving on the main:
Lonely he felt, at times, as Robin Crusoe,
And so he hired a vessel come from Spain,
Bound for Corfu: she was a fine polacca,
Manned with twelve hands, and laden with tobacco.

XCVI.

Himself, and much (heaven knows how gotten!) cash,
He then embarked with risk of life and limb,
And got clear off, although the attempt was rash;
He said that Providence protected him —
For my part, I say nothing — lest we clash
In our opinions: — well, the ship was trim,
Set sail, and kept her reckoning fairly on,
Except three days of calm when off Cape Bonn.

XCVII.

They reached the island, he transferred his lading,
And self and live stock, to another bottom,
And passed for a true Turkey-merchant, trading
With goods of various names, but I've forgot 'em.

However, he got off by this evading,
Or else the people would perhaps have shot him ;
And thus at Venice landed to reclaim
His wife, religion, house, and Christian name.

XCVIII.

His wife received, the patriarch re-baptized him,
(He made the church a present, by the way) ;
He then threw off the garments which disguised
him,
And borrowed the Count's smallclothes for a day :
His friends the more for his long absence prized
him,
Finding he'd wherewithal to make them gay,
With dinners, where he oft became the laugh of them,
For stories — but I don't believe the half of them.

XCIX.

Whate'er his youth had suffered, his old age
With wealth and talking make him some amends ;
Though Laura sometimes put him in a rage,
I've heard the Count and he were always friends.
My pen is at the bottom of a page,
Which being finished, here the story ends ;
'Tis to be wished it had been sooner done,
But stories somehow lengthen when begun.*

* [This extremely clever and amusing performance affords a very curious and complete specimen of a kind of diction and composition of which our English literature has hitherto presented very few examples. It is, in itself, absolutely a thing of nothing—without story, characters, sentiments, or intelligible object;—a mere piece of lively and loquacious prattling, in short, upon all kinds of frivolous subjects,—a sort of gay and desultory babbling about Italy and England, Turks, balls, literature, and fish sauces. But still there is something very engaging in the uniform gaiety, politeness, and good humor of the author, and something still more striking and admirable in the matchless facility with which he has cast into regular, and even difficult, versification the unmingled, unconstrained, and unselected language of the most light, familiar, and ordinary conversation. With great skill and felicity, he has furnished us with an example of about one hundred stanzas of good verse, entirely composed of common words, in their common places; never presenting us with one sprig of what is called poetical diction, or even making use of a single inversion, either to raise the style or assist the rhyme—but running on in an inexhaustible series of good easy colloquial phrases, and finding them fall into verse by some unaccountable and happy fatality. In this great and characteristic quality it is almost invariably excellent. In some other respects, it is more unequal. About one half is as good as possible, in the style to which it belongs; the other half bears, perhaps, too many marks of that haste with which such a work must necessarily be written. Some passages are rather too snappish, and some run too much on the cheap and rather plebeian humor of out-of-the-way-rhymes, and strange-sounding words and epithets. But the greater part is extremely pleasant, amiable, and gentlemanlike. —JEFFREY.]

PROPHECY OF DANTE.

"'Tis the sunset of life gives me mystical lore,
And coming events cast their shadows before."

(48)

[THIS poem, which Lord Byron, in sending it to Mr. Murray, called "the best thing he had ever done, if not unintelligible," was written in the summer of 1819, at — "that place

Of old renown, once in the Adrian sea,
Ravenna! — where from Dante's sacred tomb
He had so oft, as many a verse declares,
Drawn inspiration." — ROGERS.

The Prophecy, however, was first published in May, 1821. It is dedicated to the Countess Guiccioli, who thus describes the origin of its composition:—"On my departure from Venice, Lord Byron had promised to come and see me at Ravenna. Dante's tomb, the classical pine wood,* the relics of antiquity which are to be found in that place, afforded a sufficient pretext for me to invite him to come, and for him to accept my invitation. He came in the month of June, 1819, arriving at Ravenna on the day of the festival of the Corpus Domini. Being deprived at this time of his books, his horses, and all that occupied him at Venice, I begged him to gratify me by writing something on the subject of Dante; and, with his usual facility and rapidity, he composed his Prophecy."]

DEDICATION.

LADY ! if for the cold and cloudy clime
Where I was born, but where I would not die,
Of the great Poet-sire of Italy
I dare to build the imitative rhyme,
Harsh Runic copy of the South's sublime,
THOU art the cause ; and howsoever I
Fall short of his immortal harmony,
Thy gentle heart will pardon me the crime.
Thou, in the pride of Beauty and of Youth,
Spakest ; and for thee to speak and be obeyed
Are one ; but only in the sunny South
Such sounds are uttered, and such charms displayed,
So sweet a language from so fair a mouth —
Ah ! to what effort would it not persuade ?
Ravenna, June 21, 1819.

PREFACE.

IN the course of a visit to the city of Ravenna in the summer of 1819, it was suggested to the author that having composed something on the subject of Tasso's confinement, he should do the same on Dante's exile, — the tomb of the poet forming one of the principal objects of interest in that city, both to the native and to the stranger.

"On this hint I spake," and the result has been the following four cantos, in terza rima, now offered to the reader. If they are understood and approved, it is my purpose to continue the poem in various other cantos to its natural conclusion in the present age. The reader is requested to suppose that Dante addresses him in the interval between the conclusion of the Divina Commedia and his death, and shortly before the latter event, foretelling the fortunes of Italy in general in the ensuing centuries. In adopting this plan I have had in my mind the Cassandra of Lycophron, and the Prophecy of Nereus by Horace, as well as the Prophecies of Holy Writ. The measure adopted is the terza rima of Dante; which I am not aware to have seen hitherto tried in our language, except it may be by Mr. Hayley, of whose translation I never saw but one extract, quoted in the notes to Caliph Vathek ; so that — if I do not err — this poem may be considered as a metrical experiment. The cantos are short, and about the same length of those of the poet, whose name I have borrowed, and most probably taken in vain.

Amongst the inconveniences of authors in the present day, it is difficult for any who have a name, good or bad, to escape translation. I have had the fortune to see the fourth canto of Childe Harold translated into Italian versi sciolti, — that is, a poem written in the Spenserean stanza into blank verse, without regard to the natural divisions of the stanza or of the sense. If the present poem, being on a national topic, should chance to undergo the same fate, I would request the Italian reader to remember that when I have failed in the imitation of his great “Padre Alighier,” I have failed in imitating that which all study and few understand, since to this very day it is not yet settled what was the meaning of the allegory in the first canto of the Inferno, unless Count Marchetti’s ingenious and probable conjecture may be considered as having decided the question.

He may also pardon my failure the more, as I am not quite sure that he would be pleased with my success, since the Italians, with a pardonable nationality, are particularly jealous of all that is left them as a nation — their literature ; and in the present bitterness of the classic and romantic war, are but ill disposed to permit a foreigner even to approve or imitate them, without finding some fault with his ultramontane presumption. I can easily enter into all this, knowing what would be thought in England of an Italian imitator of Milton, or if a translation of Monti, or Pindemonte, or Arici, should be held up to the rising generation as a model for their future poetical essays. But I perceive that I am deviating into an address to the Italian reader, when my business is with the English one; and be they few or many, I must take my leave of both.

PROPHECY OF DANTE.*

CANTO THE FIRST.

ONCE more in man's frail world ! which I had left
So long that 't was forgotten ; and I feel
The weight of clay again, — too soon bereft
Of the immortal vision which could heal
My earthly sorrows, and to God's own skies
Lift me from that deep gulf without repeal,

* [Dante Alighieri was born in Florence in May, 1265, of an ancient and honorable family. In the early part of his life he gained some credit in a military character, and distinguished himself by his bravery in an action where the Florentines obtained a signal victory over the citizens of Arezzo. He became still more eminent by the acquisition of court honors ; and at the age of thirty-five he rose to be one of the chief magistrates of Florence, when that dignity was conferred by the suffrages of the people. From this exaltation the poet himself dated his principal misfortunes. Italy was at that time distracted by the contending factions of the Ghibelines and Guelphs, — among the latter Dante took an active part. In one of the proscriptions he was banished, his possessions confiscated, and he died in exile in 1321.]

Where late my ears rung with the damned cries
 Of souls in hopeless bale ; and from that place
 Of lesser torment, whence men may arise
 Pure from the fire to join the angelic race ;
 Midst whom my own bright Beatricē blessed *
 My spirit with her light ; and to the base
 Of the eternal Triad ! first, last, best,
 Mysterious, three, sole, infinite, great God !
 Soul universal ! led the mortal guest,
 Unblasted by the glory, though he trod
 From star to star to reach the almighty throne.
 Oh Beatricē ! whose sweet limbs the sod
 So long hath pressed, and the cold marble stone,
 Thou sole pure seraph of my earliest love,
 Love so ineffable, and so alone,
 That nought on earth could more my bosom move,
 And meeting thee in heaven was but to meet
 That without which my soul, like the arkless dove,
 Had wandered still in search of, nor her feet
 Relieved her wing till found ; without thy light
 My paradise had still been incomplete.†
 Since my tenth sun gave summer to my sight

* The reader is requested to adopt the Italian pronunciation of Beatrice, sounding all the syllables.

† “ Che sol per le belle opre
 Che fanno in cielo il sole e l' altre stelle,
 Dentro di lui si crede il Paradiso,
 Così se guardi fiso,
 Pensar ben dei ch' ogni terren piacere
 Si trova dove tu non puoi vedere.”

Canzone, in which Dante [?] describes the person of Beatrice, Strophe third.

Thou wert my life, the essence of my thought,
Loved ere I knew the name of love,* and bright
Still in these dim old eyes, now overwrought
With the world's war, and years, and banishment,
And tears for thee, by other woes untaught ;
For mine is not a nature to be bent
By tyrannous faction, and the brawling crowd,
And though the long, long conflict hath been spent
In vain, and never more, save when the cloud
Which overhangs the Apennine, my mind's eye
Pierces to fancy Florence, once so proud
Of me, can I return, though but to die,
Unto my native soil, they have not yet
Quenched the old exile's spirit, stern and high.
But the sun, though not overcast, must set,
And the night cometh ; I am old in days,
And deeds, and contemplation, and have met
Destruction face to face in all his ways.
The world hath left me, what it found me, pure,
And if I have not gathered yet its praise,
I sought it not by any baser lure ;
Man wrongs, and Time avenges, and my name
May form a monument not all obscure,
Though such was not my ambition's end or aim,
To add to the vain-glorious list of those
Who dabble in the pettiness of fame,

* [According to Boccaccio, Dante was a lover long before he was a soldier, and his passion for the Beatrice whom he has immortalized commenced while he was in his ninth year, and she in her eighth year. — CARY.]

And make men's fickle breath the wind that blows
 Their sail, and deem it glory to be classed
 With conquerors, and virtue's other foes,
 In bloody chronicles of ages past.

I would have had my Florence great and free : *
 Oh Florence ! Florence ! unto me thou wast
 Like that Jerusalem which the Almighty He Wept over, "but thou wouldst not ;" as the bird
 Gathers its young, I would have gathered thee
 Beneath a parent pinion, hadst thou heard
 My voice ; but as the adder, deaf and fierce,
 Against the breast that cherished thee was stirred
 Thy venom, and my state thou didst amerce,
 And doom this body forfeit to the fire.
 Alas ! how bitter is his country's curse
 To him who for that country would expire,
 But did not merit to expire by her,
 And loves her, loves her even in her ire.
 The day may come when she will cease to err,
 The day may come she would be proud to have
 The dust she dooms to scatter, and transfer †
 Of him, whom she denied a home, the grave.

in which he represents Right, Generosity, and Temperance as banished from among men, and seeking refuge from Love, who inhabits his bosom.

† "Ut si quis predictorum ullo tempore in fortiam dicti communis pervenerit, talis perveniens igne comburatur, sic quod moriatur." Second sentence of Florence against Dante, and the

But this shall not be granted ; let my dust
Lie where it falls ; nor shall the soil which gave Me breath, but in her sudden fury thrust
Me forth to breathe elsewhere, so reassume
My indignant bones, because her angry gust
Forsooth is over, and repealed her doom ;
No, — she denied me what was mine — my roof,
And shall not have what is not hers — my tomb.
Too long her armed wrath hath kept aloof
The breast which would have bled for her, the heart
That beat, the mind that was temptation proof,
The man who fought, toiled, travelled, and each part
Of a true citizen fulfilled, and saw
For his reward the Guelf's ascendant art
Pass his destruction even into a law.
These things are not made for forgetfulness,
Florence shall be forgotten first ; too raw
The wound, too deep the wrong, and the distress
Of such endurance too prolonged to make
My pardon greater, her injustice less,
Though late repented ; yet — yet for her sake
I feel some fonder yearnings, and for thine, fourteen accused with him. The Latin is worthy of the sentence. — [On the 27th of January, 1802, Dante was mulcted eight thousand lire, and condemned to two years' banishment; and in case the fine was not paid, his goods were to be confiscated. On the eleventh of March, the same year, he was sentenced to a punishment due only to the most desperate of malefactors. The decree, that he and his associates in exile should be burned, if they fell into the hands of their enemies, was first discovered in 1772.]

My own Beatrice, I would hardly take
Vengeance upon the land which once was mine,
And still is hallowed by thy dust's return,
Which would protect the murderess like a shrine,
And save ten thousand foes by thy sole urn.
Though, like old Marius from Minturnæ's marsh
And Carthage ruins, my lone breast may burn
At times with evil feelings hot and harsh,
And sometimes the last pangs of a vile foe
Writhe in a dream before me, and o'erarch
My brow with hopes of triumph, — let them go!
Such are the last infirmities of those
Who long have suffered more than mortal woe,
And yet being mortal still, have no repose
But on the pillow of Revenge — Revenge,
Who sleeps to dream of blood, and waking glows
With the oft-baffled, slakeless thirst of change,
When we shall mount again, and they that trod
Be trampled on, while Death and Até range
O'er humbled heads and severed necks — Great God!

Take these thoughts from me — to thy hands I yield

My many wrongs, and thine almighty rod
Will fall on those who smote me, — be my shield!
As thou hast been in peril, and in pain,
In turbulent cities, and the tented field —
In toil, and many troubles borne in vain
For Florence. — I appeal from her to Thee!
Thee, whom I late saw in thy loftiest reign,

Even in that glorious vision, which to see
And live was never granted until now,
And yet thou hast permitted this to me.
Alas! with what a weight upon my brow
The sense of earth and earthly things come back,
Corrosive passions, feelings dull and low,
The heart's quick throb upon the mental rack,
Long day, and dreary night; the retrospect
Of half a century bloody and black,
And the frail few years I may yet expect
Hoary and hopeless, but less hard to bear,
For I have been too long and deeply wrecked
On the lone rock of desolate Despair
To lift my eyes more to the passing sail
Which shuns that reef so horrible and bare;
Nor raise my voice — for who would heed my wail?
I am not of this people, nor this age,
And yet my harpings will unfold a tale
Which shall preserve these times when not a page
Of their perturbed annals could attract
An eye to gaze upon their civil rage,
Did not my verse embalm full many an act
Worthless as they who wrought it: 'tis the doom
Of spirits of my order to be racked
In life, to wear their hearts out, and consume
Their days in endless strife, and die alone;
Then future thousands crowd around their tomb,
And pilgrims come from climes where they have known
The name of him — who now is but a name,

And wasting homage o'er the sullen stone,
 Spread his — by him unheard, unheeded — fame;
 And mine at least hath cost me dear: to die
 Is nothing; but to wither thus — to tame
 My mind down from its own infinity —
 To live in narrow ways with little men,
 A common sight to every common eye,
 A wanderer, while even wolves can find a den,
 Ripped from all kindred, from all home, all things
 That make communion sweet, and soften pain —
 To feel me in the solitude of kings
 Without the power that makes them bear a crown —
 To envy every dove his nest and wings
 Which waft him where the Apennine looks down
 On Arno, till he perches, it may be,
 Within my all inexorable town,
 Where yet my boys are, and that fatal she,*

* This lady, whose name was Gemma, sprung from one of the most powerful Guelf families, named Donati. Corso Donati was the principal adversary of the Ghibellines. She is described as being "Admodum morosa, ut de Xantippe Socratis philosophi conjugis scriptum esse legimus," according to Giannozzo Manetti. But Lionardo Aretino is scandalized with Boccace, in his life of Dante, for saying that literary men should not marry. "Qui il Boccaccio non ha pazienza, e dice, le mogli esser contrarie agli studj; e non si ricorda che Socrate il più nobile filosofo che mai fosse, ebbe moglie e figliuoli e uffici della Repubblica nella sua Città; e Aristotele che, etc. etc. ebbe due mogli in varj tempi, ed ebbe figliuoli, e ricchezze assai. — E Marco Tullio — e Catone — e Varrone — e Seneca — ebbero moglie," etc. etc. It is odd that honest Lionardo's examples, with the exception of Seneca, and, for any thing I know, of Aristotle, are not the most felicitous. Tully's Terentia, and Socrates' Xantippe, by no means contributed to their husbands' happiness, whatever they might as to their philosophy — Cato gave away his wife — of Varro's we know nothing — and of Seneca's, only that she was disposed to die with him, but recovered, and lived several years afterwards. But, says Lionardo, "L'uomo è animale civile, secondo piace a tutti i filosofi." And thence concludes that the greatest proof of the animal's civism is "la prima congiunzione, dalla quale moltiplicata nasce la Città."

* [The violence of Gemma's temper proved a source of the bitterest suffering to Dante; and in that passage of the Inferno, where one of the characters says —

'La fiera moglie più ch' altro, mi nuoce,
 — ' me, my wife,
 Of savage temper, more than aught beside,
 Hath to this evil brought,'

his own conjugal unhappiness must have recurred forcibly and painfully to his mind. — CARY.]

THE
PROPHECY OF DANTE.

CANTO THE SECOND.

THE Spirit of the fervent days of Old,
When words were things that came to pass, and thought
Flashed o'er the future, bidding men behold
Their children's children's doom already brought Forth from the abyss of time which is to be,
The chaos of events, where lie half-wrought
Shapes that must undergo mortality ;
What the great Seers of Israel wore within,
That spirit was on them, and is on me,
And if, Cassandra-like, amidst the din
Of conflict none will hear, or hearing heed
This voice from out the Wilderness, the sin
Be theirs, and my own feelings be my meed,
The only guerdon I have ever known.
Hast thou not bled ? and hast thou still to bleed,
Italia ? Ah ! to me such things, foreshown
With dim sepulchral light, bid me forget
In thine irreparable wrongs my own :

We can have but one country, and even yet
Thou'rt mine—my bones shall be within thy breast,
My soul within thy language, which once set
With our old Roman sway in the wide West ;
But I will make another tongue arise
As lofty and more sweet, in which expressed
The hero's ardor, or the lover's sighs,
Shall find alike such sounds for every theme
That every word, as brilliant as thy skies,
Shall realize a poet's proudest dream,
And make thee Europe's nightingale of song ;
So that all present speech to thine shall seem
The note of meaner birds, and every tongue
Confess its barbarism when compared with thine.
This shalt thou owe to him thou didst so wrong,
Thy Tuscan bard, the banished Ghibelline.
Woe! woe! the veil of coming centuries
Is rent, — a thousand years which yet supine
Lie like the ocean waves ere winds arise,
Heaving in dark and sullen undulation,
Float from eternity into these eyes ;
The storms yet sleep, the clouds still keep their station,
The unborn earthquake yet is in the womb
The bloody chaos yet expects creation,
But all things are disposing for thy doom ;
The elements await but for the word,
“Let there be darkness!” and thou growest a tomb!
Yes! thou, so beautiful, shalt feel the sword,
Thou, Italy! so fair that Paradise,

Revived in thee, blooms forth to man restored:
Ah! must the sons of Adam lose it twice?
Thou, Italy! whose ever golden fields,
Ploughed by the sunbeams solely, would suffice
For the world's granary; thou, whose sky heaven gilds
With brighter stars, and robes with deeper blue;
Thou, in whose pleasant places Summer builds
Her palace, in whose cradle Empire grew,
And formed the Eternal City's ornaments
From spoils of kings whom freemen overthrew;
Birthplace of heroes, sanctuary of saints,
Where earthly first, then heavenly glory made
Her home; thou, all which fondest fancy paints,
And finds her prior vision but portrayed
In feeble colors, when the eye — from the Alp
Of horrid snow, and rock, and shaggy shade
Of desert-loving pine, whose emerald scalp
Nods to the storm — dilates and dotes o'er thee,
And wistfully implores, as 't were, for help;
To see thy sunny fields, my Italy,
Nearer and nearer yet, and dearer still
The more approached, and dearest were they free.
Thou — Thou must wither to each tyrant's will:
The Goth hath been, — the German, Frank, and Hun
Are yet to come, — and on the imperial hill
Ruin, already proud of the deeds done
By the old barbarians, there awaits the new,
Throned on the Palatine, while lost and won
Rome at her feet lies bleeding; and the hue

Of human sacrifice and Roman slaughter
Troubles the clotted air, of late so blue,
And deepens into red the saffron water
Of Tiber, thick with dead; the helpless priest,
And still more helpless nor less holy daughter,
Vowed to their God, have shrieking fled, and ceased
Their ministry: the nations take their prey,
Iberian, Almain, Lombard, and the beast
And bird, wolf, vulture, more humane than they Are; these but gorge the flesh and lap the gore
Of the departed, and then go their way;
But those, the human savages, explore
All paths of torture, and insatiate yet,
With Ugolino hunger prowls for more.
Nine moons shall rise o'er scenes like this and set;*
The chiefless army of the dead, which late
Beneath the traitor Prince's banner met,
Hath left its leader's ashes at the gate;
Had but the royal Rebel lived, perchance
Thou hadst been spared, but his involved thy fate.
Oh! Rome, the spoiler or the spoil of France,
From Brennus to the Bourbon, never, never Shall foreign standard to thy walls advance
But Tiber shall become a mournful river.
Oh! when the strangers pass the Alps and Po, Crush them, ye rocks! floods overwhelm them, and for ever!
Why sleep the idle avalanches so,

* See "Sacco di Roma," generally attributed to Guicciardini.
There is another written by a Jacopo Buonaparte.

To topple on the lonely pilgrim's head ?
Why doth Eridanus but overflow
The peasant's harvest from his turbid bed ?
Were not each barbarous horde a nobler prey ?
Over Cambyzes' host the desert spread
Her sandy ocean, and the sea waves' sway
Rolled over Pharaoh and his thousands, — why,
Mountains and waters, do ye not as they ?
And you, ye men ! Romans, who dare not die,
Sons of the conquerors who overthrew
Those who overthrew proud Xerxes, where yet lie
The dead whose tomb Oblivion never knew,
Are the Alps weaker than Thermopylæ ?
Their passes more alluring to the view
Of an invader ? is it they, or ye,
That to each host the mountain-gate unbar,
And leave the march in peace, the passage free ?
Why, Nature's self detains the victor's car,
And makes your land impregnable, if earth
Could be so ; but alone she will not war,
Yet aids the warrior worthy of his birth
In a soil where the mothers bring forth men
Not so with those whose souls are little worth ;
For them no fortress can avail, — the den
Of the poor reptile which preserves its sting
Is more secure than walls of adamant, when
The hearts of those within are quivering.
Are ye not brave ? Yes, yet the Ausonian soil Hath hearts, and hands, and arms, and hosts to bring

Against Oppression ; but how vain the toil,
While still Division sows the seeds of woe
And weakness, till the stranger reaps the spoil.
Oh ! my own beauteous land ! so long laid low,
So long the grave of thy own children's hopes,
When there is but required a single blow
To break the chain, yet — yet the Avenger stops,
And Doubt and Discord step 'twixt thine and thee,
And join their strength to that which with thee
copes ;
What is there wanting then to set thee free,
And show thy beauty in its fullest light ?
To make the Alps impassable ; and we,
Her sons, may do this with one deed — Unite.

PROPHECY OF DANTE

CANTO THE THIRD.

FROM out the mass of never-dying ill,
The Plague, the Prince, the Stranger, and the Sword,
Vials of wrath but emptied to refill
And flow again, I cannot all record
That crowds on my prophetic eye : the earth
And ocean written o'er would not afford
Space for the annal, yet it shall go forth ;
Yes, all, though not by human pen, is graven,
There where the furthest suns and stars have birth,
Spread like a banner at the gate of heaven,
The bloody scroll of our millennial wrongs
Waves, and the echo of our groans is driven
Athwart the sound of archangelic songs,
And Italy, the martyred nation's gore,
Will not in vain arise to where belongs
Omnipotence and mercy evermore :
Like to a harpstring stricken by the wind,
The sound of her lament shall, rising o'er

(67)

The seraph voices, touch the Almighty Mind.
Meantime I, humblest of thy sons, and of Earth's dust by immortality refined
To sense and suffering, though the vain may scoff,
And tyrants threat, and meeker victims bow
Before the storm because its breath is rough,
To thee, my country ! whom before, as now,
I loved and love, devote the mournful lyre
And melancholy gift high powers allow
To read the future ; and if now my fire
Is not as once it shone o'er thee, forgive !
I but foretell thy fortunes — then expire ;
Think not that I would look on them and live.
A spirit forces me to see and speak,
And for my guerdon grants not to survive ;
My heart shall be poured over thee and break :
Yet for a moment, ere I must resume
Thy sable web of sorrow, let me take Over the gleams that flash athwart thy gloom
A softer glimpse ; some stars shine through thy night,
And many meteors, and above thy tomb
Leans sculptured Beauty, which Death cannot blight ;
And from thine ashes boundless spirits rise
To give thee honor, and the earth delight ;
Thy soil shall still be pregnant with the wise,
The gay, the learned, the generous, and the brave,
Native to thee as summer to thy skies,
Conquerors on foreign shores, and the far wave,*

* Alexander of Parma, Spinola, Pescara, Eugene of Savoy, Montecucco.

Discoverers of new worlds, which take their name; *
For thee alone they have no arm to save,
And all thy recompense is in their fame,
A noble one to them, but not to thee —
Shall they be glorious, and thou still the same?
Oh! more than these illustrious far shall be
The being — and even yet he may be born —
The mortal savior who shall set thee free,
And see thy diadem so changed and worn
By fresh barbarians, on thy brow replaced;
And the sweet sun replenishing thy morn,
Thy moral morn, too long with clouds defaced
And noxious vapors from Avernus risen,
Such as all they must breathe who are debased
By servitude, and have the mind in prison.
Yet through this centuried eclipse of woe
Some voices shall be heard, and earth shall listen;
Poets shall follow in the path I show,
And make it broader; the same brilliant sky
Which cheers the birds to song shall bid them glow,
And raise their notes as natural and high;
Tuneful shall be their numbers; they shall sing
Many of love, and some of liberty,
But few shall soar upon that eagle's wing,
And look in the sun's face with eagle's gaze,
All free and fearless as the feathered king,
But fly more near the earth; how many a phrase
Sublime shall lavished be on some small prince
In all the prodigality of praise!

‡ Petrarch.

And love shall be his torment; but his grief
Shall make an immortality of tears,
And Italy shall hail him as the Chief
Of Poet-lovers, and his highest song
Of Freedom wreath him with as green a leaf.
But in a further age shall rise along
The banks of Po two greater still than he;
The world which smiled on him shall do them wrong
Till they are ashes, and repose with me.
The first will make an epoch with his lyre,
And fill the earth with feats of chivalry:
His fancy like a rainbow, and his fire,
Like that of Heaven, immortal, and his thought
Borne onward with a wing that cannot tire:
Pleasure shall, like a butterfly new caught,
Flutter her lovely pinions o'er his theme,
And Art itself seem into Nature wrought
By the transparency of his bright dream. —
The second, of a tenderer, sadder mood,
Shall pour his soul out o'er Jerusalem;
He, too, shall sing of arms, and Christian blood
Shed where Christ bled for man; and his high harp
Shall, by the willow over Jordan's flood,
Revive a song of Sion, and the sharp
Conflict, and final triumph of the brave
And pious, and the strife of hell to warp
Their hearts from their great purpose, until wave
The red-cross banners where the first red Cross
Was crimsoned from his veins who died to save
Shall be his sacred argument; the loss

Of years, of favor, freedom, even of fame
Contested for a time, while the smooth gloss
Of courts would slide o'er his forgotten name,
And call captivity a kindness, meant
To shield him from insanity or shame,
Such shall be his meet guerdon ! who was sent
To be Christ's Laureate — they reward him well !
Florence dooms me but death or banishment,
Ferrara him a pittance and a cell,
Harder to bear and less deserved, for I
Had stung the factions which I strove to quell ;
But this meek man, who with a lover's eye
Will look on earth and heaven, and who will deign
To embalm with his celestial flattery
As poor a thing as e'er was spawned to reign,
What will he do to merit such a doom ?
Perhaps he'll love, — and is not love in vain
Torture enough without a living tomb ?
Yet it will be so — he and his compeer,
The Bard of Chivalry, will both consume
In penury and pain too many a year,
And, dying in despondency, bequeathe
To the kind world, which scarce will yield a tear
A heritage enriching all who breathe
With the wealth of a genuine poet's soul,
And to their country a redoubled wreath,
Unmatched by time ; not Hellas can unroll
Through her olympiads two such names, though one
Of hers be mighty ; — and is this the whole
Of such men's destiny beneath the sun ?

Must all the finer thoughts, the thrilling sense,
The electric blood with which their arteries run,
Their body's self turned soul with the intense
Feeling of that which is, and fancy of
That which should be, to such a recompense
Conduct? shall their bright plumage on the rough
Storm be still scattered? Yes, and it must be,
For, formed of far too penetrable stuff,
These birds of Paradise but long to flee
Back to their native mansion, soon they find
Earth's mist with their pure pinions not agree,
And die or are degraded, for the mind
Succumbs to long infection, and despair,
And vulture passions flying close behind,
Await the moment to assail and tear ;
And when at length the winged wanderers stoop,
Then is the prey-birds' triumph, then they share
The spoil, o'erpowered at length by one fell swoop,
Yet some have been untouched who learned to bear,
Some whom no power could ever force to droop,
Who could resist themselves even, hardest care !
And task most hopeless ; but some such have been,
And if my name amongst the number were,
That destiny austere, and yet serene,
Were prouder than more dazzling fame unblessed ;
The Alp's snow summit nearer heaven is seen
Than the volcano's fierce eruptive crest,
Whose splendor from the black abyss is flung,
While the scorched mountain, from whose burning breast

A temporary torturing flame is wrung,
Shines for a night of terror, then repels
Its fire back to the hell from whence it sprung,
The hell which in its entrails ever dwells.

THE
PROPHECY OF DANTE.

CANTO THE FOURTH.

MANY are poets who have never penned
Their inspiration, and perchance the best :
They felt, and loved, and died, but would not lend
Their thoughts to meaner beings ; they compressed
The God within them, and rejoined the stars
Unlaurelled upon earth, but far more blessed
Than those who are degraded by the jars
Of passion, and their frailties linked to fame,
Conquerors of high renown, but full of scars.
Many are poets but without the name,
For what is poesy but to create
From overfeeling good or ill ; and aim
At an external life beyond our fate,
And be the new Prometheus of new men,
Bestowing fire from heaven, and then, too late,
Finding the pleasure given repaid with pain,
And vultures to the heart of the bestower,
Who, having lavished his high gift in vain,

(75)

Lies chained to his lone rock by the sea-shore?
So be it: we can bear. — But thus all they Whose intellect is an o'ermastering power
Which still recoils from its encumbering clay
Or lightens it to spirit, whatsoe'er
The form which their creations may essay,
Are bards; the kindled marble's bust may wear
More poesy upon its speaking brow
Than aught less than the Homeric page may bear;
One noble stroke with a whole life may glow,
Or deify the canvass till it shine
With beauty so surpassing all below,
That they who kneel to idols so divine
Break no commandment, for high heaven is there
Transfused, transfigured: and the line
Of poesy, which peoples but the air
With thought and beings of our thought reflected,
Can do no more: then let the artist share
The palm, he shares the peril, and dejected
Faints o'er the labor unapproved — Alas!
Despair and Genius are too oft connected.
Within the ages which before me pass
Art shall resume and equal even the sway
Which with Apelles and old Phidias
She held in Hellas' unforgotten day.
Ye shall be taught by Ruin to revive
The Grecian forms at least from their decay,
And Roman souls at last again shall live
In Roman works wrought by Italian hands,
And temples, loftier than the old temples, give

New wonders to the world ; and while still stands
 The austere Pantheon, into heaven shall soar
 A dome,* its image, while the base expands
 Into a fane surpassing all before,
 Such as all flesh shall flock to kneel in : ne'er
 Such sight hath been unfolded by a door
 As this, to which all nations shall repair,
 And lay their sins at this huge gate of heaven.
 And the bold Architect unto whose care
 The daring charge to raise it shall be given,
 Whom all arts shall acknowledge as their lord,

SONETTO

Di Giovanni Battista Zappi.

Oh! è costui, che in dura pietra scolto,
 Siede gigante ; e le più illustre e conte
 Opre dell' arte avvanza, e ha vive e pronte
 Le labbra sì, che le parole ascolto ?
 Quest' è Mosè ; ben me 'l diceva il folto
 Onor del mento, e 'l doppio raggio in fronte.
 Quest' è Mosè, quando scendea del monte,
 E gran parte del Nume avea nel volto.
 Tal era allor, che le sonanti e vaste
 Acque ei sospese a se d' intorno, e tale
 Quando il mar chiuse, e ne fè tomba altrui.
 E voi sue turbe un rio vitello alzaste ?
 Alzata avete imago a questa eguale !
 Oh' era men fallo l' adorar costui.

 Sits giant-like ? stern monument of art
 Unparalleled, while language seems to start
 From his prompt lips, and we his precepts own ?

Israel left Egypt, stop the waves in stone,
 Or hues of Hell be by his pencil poured
 Over the damned before the Judgment throne,*
 Such as I saw them, such as all shall see,
 Or fanes be built of grandeur yet unknown,
 The stream of his great thoughts shall spring from

 And the twin beams that from his temples dart;
 'Tis Moses; seated on the mount apart,
 Whilst yet the Godhead o'er his features shone.
 Such once he looked, when ocean's sounding wave
 Suspended hung, and such amidst the storm,
 When o'er his foes the reflux waters roared.
 An idol calf his followers did engrave;
 But had they raised this awe-commanding form,
 Then had they with less guilt their work adored."—ROBERTS.

† I have read somewhere (if I do not err, for I cannot recollect where,) that Dante was so great a favorite of Michael Angelo's, that he had designed the whole of the Divina Commedia; but that the volume containing these studies was lost by sea. — ["Michael Angelo's copy of Dante," says Duppa, "was a large folio, with Landino's commentary; and upon the broad margin of the leaves he designed, with a pen and ink, all the interesting subjects. This book was possessed by Antonio Montauti, a sculptor and architect of Florence, who, being appointed architect to St. Peter's, removed to Rome, and shipped his effects at Leghorn for Civita Vecchia, among which was this edition of Dante: in the voyage the vessel foundered at sea, and it was unfortunately lost in the wreck."]

Shall be the Age of Beauty, and while whelms
Calamity the nations with distress,
The genius of my country shall arise,
A Cedar towering o'er the Wilderness,
Lovely in all its branches to all eyes,
Fragrant as fair, and recognized afar,
Wafting its native incense through the skies.
Sovereigns shall pause amidst their sport of war,
Weaned for an hour from blood, to turn and gaze
On canvas or on stone; and they who mar
All beauty upon earth, compelled to praise,
Shall feel the power of that which they destroy;
And Art's mistaken gratitude shall raise
To tyrants who but take her for a toy
Emblems and monuments, and prostitute

* See the treatment of Michael Angelo by Julius II., and his neglect by Leo X.—[Julius II. was no sooner seated on the papal throne than he was surrounded by men of genius, and Michael Angelo was among the first invited to his court. The pope had a personal attachment to him, and conversed with him upon every subject, as well as sculpture, with familiarity and friendship; and, that he might visit him frequently, and with perfect convenience, caused a covered bridge to be made from the Vatican palace to his study, to enable him to pass at all times without being observed. On paying his visit one morning, Michael Angelo was rudely interrupted by the person in waiting, who said, "I have an order not to let you enter." Michael felt with indignation this unmerited disgrace, and, in the warmth of resentment, desired him to tell the Pope, "from that time forward, if his Holiness should want him, he should have to seek him in another place." On his return home, he ordered his servants to sell the furniture in his house to the

The man of genius as the meanest brute
To bear a burden, and to serve a need,
To sell his labors, and his soul to boot.
Who toils for nations may be poor indeed,
But free; who sweats for monarchs is no more
Than the gilt chamberlain, who, clothed and fee'd,
Stands sleek and slavish, bowing at his door.
Oh, Power that rulest and inspirest! how
Is it that they on earth, whose earthly power
Is likest thine in heaven in outward show,
Least like to thee in attributes divine,
Tread on the universal necks that bow,
And then assure us that their rights are thine?
And how is it that they, the sons of fame,
Whose inspiration seems to them to shine
From high, they whom the nations ofttest name,
Must pass their days in penury or pain,

Jews, and to follow him to Florence. Himself, the same evening, took post, and arrived at Poggibonzi castle, in Tuscany, before he rested. The Pope despatched five couriers with orders to conduct him back: but he was not overtaken until he was in a foreign state. A reconciliation was, however, a few months after, effected at Bologna, through the mediation of the gonfaloniere. As Michael Angelo entered the presence chamber, the Pope gave him an askance look of displeasure, and after a short pause saluted him, "In the stead of your coming to us, you seem to have expected that we should wait upon you." Michael Angelo replied, with submission, that his error arose from too hastily feeling a disgrace that he was unconscious of meriting, and hoped his Holiness would pardon what was past. The Pope thereupon gave him his benediction, and restored him to his friendship. The whole reign of Leo X. was a blank in the life of Michael Angelo. — DUPPA.]

- Or step to grandeur through the paths of shame,
And wear a deeper brand and gaudier chain?
Or if their destiny be born aloof
From lowliness, or tempted thence in vain,
In their own souls sustain a harder proof,
The inner war of passions deep and fierce?
Florence! when thy harsh sentence razed my roof,
I loved thee; but the vengeance of my verse,
The hate of injuries which every year
Makes greater and accumulates my curse,

Thy pride, thy wealth, thy freedom, and even that,
The most infernal of all evils here,
The sway of petty tyrants in a state;
For such sway is not limited to kings,
And demagogues yield to them but in date

In discord, cowardice, cruelty, all that springs
From Death the Sin-born's incest with his mother,
In rank oppression in its rudest shape,

Florence! when this lone spirit, which so long
Yearned, as the captive toiling at escape,
To fly back to thee in despite of wrong,
An exile, saddest of all prisoners,
Who has the whole world for a dungeon strong,
Seas, mountains, and the horizon's verge for bars,
Which shut him from the sole small spot of earth

Where — whatsoe'er his fate — he still were hers,
 His country's, and might die where he had birth —
 Florence! when this lone spirit shall return

* [In his "Convito," Dante speaks of his banishment, and the poverty and distress which attended it, in very affecting terms. About the year 1316, his friends obtained his restoration to his country and his possessions, on condition that he should pay a certain sum of money, and, entering a church, there avow himself guilty, and ask pardon of the republic. "Far," he replied, "from the man who is familiar with philosophy, be the senseless baseness of a heart of earth, that could do like a little sciolist, and imitate the infamy of some others, by offering himself up as it were in chains. Far from the man who cries aloud for justice, this compromise, by his money, with his persecutors! No, my Father, this is not the way that shall lead me back to my country. But I shall return with hasty steps, if you or any other can open to me a way that shall not derogate from the fame and honor of Dante; but if by no such way Florence can be entered, then Florence I shall never enter. What! shall I not everywhere enjoy the sight of the sun and stars? and may I not seek and contemplate, in every corner of the earth under the canopy of heaven, consoling and delightful truth, without first rendering myself inglorious, nay infamous, to the people and republic of Florence? * [Dante died at Ravenna in 1321, in the palace of his patron, Guido Novello da Polenta, who testified his sorrow and respect by the sumptuousness of his obsequies, and by giving orders to erect a monument, which he did not live to complete. His countrymen showed, too late, that they knew the value of what they had lost. At the beginning of the next century, they entreated that the mortal remains of their illustrious citizen might be restored to them, and deposited among the tombs of their fathers. But the people of Ravenna were unwilling to part with the sad and honorable memorial of their own hospitality. No better success attended the subsequent negotiations of the Florentines for the same purpose, though renewed under the auspices of Leo X., and conducted through the powerful mediation of Michael Angelo.]

FRANCESCA OF RIMINI.

[THIS translation, of what is generally considered the most exquisitely pathetic episode in the Divina Commedia, was executed in March, 1820, at Ravenna, where, just five centuries before, and in the very house in which the unfortunate lady was born, Dante's poem had been composed.

In mitigation of the crime of Francesca, Boccaccio relates, that "Guido engaged to give his daughter in marriage to Lanciotto, the eldest son of his enemy, the master of Rimini. Lanciotto, who was hideously deformed in countenance and figure, foresaw that, if he presented himself in person, he should be rejected by the lady. He therefore resolved to marry her by proxy, and sent as his representative his younger brother, Paolo, the handsomest and most accomplished man in all Italy. Francesca saw Paolo arrive, and imagined she beheld her future husband. That mistake was the commencement of her passion. The friends of Guido addressed him in strong remonstrances, and mournful predictions of the dangers to which he exposed a daughter, whose high spirit would never brook to be sacrificed with impunity. But Guido was no longer in a condition to make war; and the necessities of the politician overcame the feelings of the father."

In transmitting his version to Mr. Murray, Lord Byron says — "Enclosed you will find, line for line, in third rhyme (terza rima), of which your British blackguard reader as yet understands nothing, Fanny of Rimini. You know that she was born here, and married, and slain, from Cary, Boyd, and such people. I have done it into cramp English, line for line, and rhyme for rhyme, to try the possibility. If it is published, publish it with the original."

In one of the poet's MS. Diaries we find the following passage:—"January 29, 1821, past midnight—one of the clock. I have been reading Frederick Schlegel* till now, and I can make out nothing. He evidently shows a great power of words, but there is nothing to be taken hold of. He is like Hazlitt in English, who talks pimples; a red and white corruption rising up

I like him the worse (that is, Schlegel), because he always seems upon the verge of meaning; and, lo! he goes down like sunset, or melts like a rainbow, leaving a rather rich confusion. Of Dante, he says, that 'at no time has the greatest and most national of all Italian poets ever been much the favorite of his countrymen!' 'T is false. There have been more editors and commentators (and imitators ultimately) of Dante than of all their poets put together. Not a favorite! Why, they talk Dante — write Dante — and think and dream Dante, at this moment (1821), to an excess which would be ridiculous, but that he deserves it. He says also that Dante's 'chief defect is a want, in a word, of gentle feelings.' Of gentle feelings! — and Francesca of Rimini — and the father's feelings in Ugolino — and Beatrice — and 'La Pia!' Why, there is a gentleness in Dante beyond all gentleness, when he is tender. It is true that, treating of the Christian Hades, or Hell, there is not much scope or site for gentleness: but who but Dante could have introduced any 'gentleness' at all into Hell? Is there any in Milton's? No — and Dante's Heaven is all love, and glory, and majesty."]

His brother Paolo, who unhappily possessed those graces which the husband of Francesca wanted, engaged her affections; and being taken in adultery, they were both put to death by the enraged Lanciotto. The interest of this pathetic narrative is much increased, when it is recollected that the father of this unfortunate lady was the beloved friend and generous protector of Dante during his latter days.]

MORGANTE MAGGIORE
OF PULCL

(95)

ADVERTISEMENT.

THE Morgante Maggiore, of the first canto of which this translation is offered, divides with the Orlando Innamorato the honor of having formed and suggested the style and story of Ariosto. The great defects of Boiardo were his treating too seriously the narratives of chivalry, and his harsh style. Ariosto, in his continuation, by a judicious mixture of the gaiety of Pulci, has avoided the one; and Berni, in his reformation of Boiardo's poem, has corrected the other. Pulci may be considered as the precursor and model of Berni altogether, as he has partly been to Ariosto, however inferior to both his copyists. He is no less the founder of a new style of poetry very lately sprung up in England. I allude to that of the ingenious Whistlecraft. The serious poems on Roncesvalles in the same language, and more particularly the excellent one of Mr. Merivale, are to be traced to the same source. It has never yet been decided entirely whether Pulci's intention was or was not to deride the religion which is one of his favorite topics.

It appears to me, that such an intention would have been no less hazardous to the poet than to the priest, particularly in that age and country ; and the permission to publish the poem, and its reception among the classics of Italy, prove that it neither was nor is so interpreted. That he intended to ridicule the monastic life, and suffered his imagination to play with the simple dulness of his converted giant, seems evident enough ; but surely it were as unjust to accuse him of irreligion on this account, as to denounce Fielding for his Parson Adams, Barnabas, Thwackum, Supple, and the Ordinary in Jonathan Wild, — or Scott, for the exquisite use of his Covenanters in the "Tales of my Landlord."

In the following translation I have used the liberty of the original with the proper names ; as Pulci uses Gan, Ganellon, or Ganellone ; Carlo, Carlomagno or Carlomano ; Rondel, or Rondello, etc. as it suits his convenience ; so has the translator. In other respects the version is faithful to the best of the translator's ability in combining his interpretation of the one language with the not very easy task of reducing it to the same versification in the other. The reader, on comparing it with the original, is requested to remember that the antiquated language of Pulci, however pure, is not easy to the generality of Italians themselves, from its great mixture of Tuscan proverbs ; and he may therefore be more indulgent to the present attempt. How far the translator has succeeded, and whether or no he shall continue the work, are questions which the public will decide. He was induced to make the experiment partly by his love for, and partial intercourse with, the Italian language, of which it is so easy to acquire a slight knowledge, and with which it is so nearly impossible for a foreigner to become accurately conversant. The Italian language is like a capricious beauty, who accords her smiles to all, her favors to few, and sometimes least to those who have courted her longest. The translator wished also to present in an English dress a part at least of a poem never yet rendered into a northern language; at the same time that it has been the original of some of the most celebrated productions on this side of the Alps, as well as of those recent experiments in poetry in England which have been already mentioned.

INTRODUCTION

TO THE MORGANTE MAGGIORE.

THE translation of the Morgante of Pulci was chiefly executed at Ravenna in 1820, and was first published in "The Liberal." Such was the care bestowed by Byron upon the task, that he only accomplished two stanzas a night, which was his principal time for composition, and such was his opinion of his success, that he always maintained that there was no such translation in the English language, and never would be such another. He appears to have thought that its merit consisted in the verbum pro verbo closeness of the version, rendered doubly difficult by the character of the poem, which, besides being humorous is full of vulgar Florentine idioms, abrupt transitions, ungrammatical constructions, and sententious obscurity. The immense labor of mastering these accumulated obstacles * explains Byron's over-estimate of the piece.

"Why," he wrote to Mr. Murray in 1821, "don't you publish my Pulci—the best thing I ever wrote?"

The first edition of the original Morgante was published at Venice in 1481. The characters are derived from some chivalrous romances of the thirteenth century. It is a question whether Pulci designed a burlesque or a serious poem,—Ugo Foscolo maintaining that the air of ridicule arose from the contrast between the absurdity of the materials and the effort of the author to render them sublime; while Sismondi contends that the belief in the marvellous being much diminished, the adventures which formerly were heard with gravity could not be reproduced without a mixture of mockery. Hallam agrees with the latter, and thinks that Pulci meant to scoff at heroes whom duller poets held up to admiration.

There has been an equal difference of opinion upon the parts of the poem which touch on religion. Ugo Foscolo considers Pulci a devout Catholic who laughed at particular dogmas and divines; Sismondi doubts whether to charge him with gross bigotry or profane derision; and Hallam thinks that under pretence of ridiculing the intermixture of theology with romance, he had an intention of exposing religion to contempt. Whatever may have been his theoretical creed, he shows by his mode of treating sacred topics that he was entirely destitute of reverence. Byron was asked to allow some suppressions in his translation, to which he replied that Pulci must answer for his own impiety.

MORGANTE MAGGIORE.

CANTO PRIMO.

I.

IN principio era il Verbo appresso a Dio,
Ed era Iddio il Verbo, e'l Verbo lui:
Questo era nel-principio, al parer mio;
E nulla si può far senza costui:
Però, giusto Signor benigno e pio,
Mandami solo un de gli angeli tui,
Che m'accompagni, e rechimi a memoria
Una famosa antica e degna storia.

II.

E tu Vergine, figlia, e madre, e sposa
Di quel Signor, che ti dette le chiave
Del cielo e dell' abisso, e d'ogni cosa,
Quel dì che Gabriel tuo ti disse Ave!
Perchè tu se' de' tuo' servi pietosa,
Con dolce rime, e stil grato e soave,
Ajuta i versi miei benignamente,
E'nfino al fine allumina la mente.

THE
MORGANTE MAGGIORE.

CANTO THE FIRST.

I.

In the beginning was the Word next God ;
God was the Word, the Word no less was he :
This was in the beginning, to my mode
Of thinking, and without him nought could be :
Therefore, just Lord ! from out thy high abode,
Benign and pious, bid an angel flee,
One only, to be my companion, who Shall help my famous, worthy, old song through.

II.

And thou, oh Virgin ! daughter, mother, bride,
Of the same Lord, who gave to you each key
Of heaven, and hell, and every thing beside,
The day thy Gabriel said " All hail ! " to thee,
Since to thy servants pity's ne'er denied,
With flowing rhymes, a pleasant style and free,
Be to my verses then benignly kind,
And to the end illuminate my mind.

III.

Era nel tempo, quando Filomena
Con la sorella si lamenta e plora,
Che si ricorda di sua antica pena,
E pe' boschetti le ninfè innamorata,
E Febo il carro temperato mena,
Che 'l suo Fetonte l'ammaestra ancora ;
Ed appariva appunto all'orizzonte,
Tal che Titon si graffiava la fronte.

IV.

Quand'io varai la mia barchetta, prima
Per ubbidir chi sempre ubbidir debbe
La mente, e faticarsi in prosa e in rima,
E del mio Carlo Imperador m'incerebbe ;
Che so quanti la penna ha posto in cima,
Che tutti la sua gloria prevarrebbe :
E stata quella istoria, a quel ch' i' veggio,
Di Carlo male intesa, e scritta peggio.

V.

Diceva già Lionardo Aretino,
Che s' egli avesse avuto scrittor degno,
Com'egli ebbe un Ormanno il suo Pipino,
Ch'avesse diligenza avuto e ingegno ;
Sarebbe Carlo Magno un uom divino ;
Però ch'egli ebbe gran vittorie e regno,
E fece per la chiesa e per la fede
Certo assai più, che non si dice o crede.

III.

'T was in the season when sad Philomel
Weeps with her sister, who remembers and
Deplores the ancient woes which both befell,
And makes the nymphs enamoured, to the hand
Of Phaeton by Phœbus loved so well
His car (but tempered by his sire's command)
Was given, and on the horizon's verge just now
Appeared, so that Tithonus scratched his brow :

IV.

When I prepared my bark first to obey,
As it should still obey, the helm, my mind,
And carry prose or rhyme, and this my lay
Of Charles the Emperor, whom you will find
By several pens already praised ; but they
Who to diffuse his glory were inclined,
For all that I can see in prose or verse,
Have understood Charles badly, and wrote worse.

V.

Leonardo Aretino said already,
That if like Pepin, Charles had had a writer
Of genius quick, and diligently steady,
No hero would in history look brighter ;
He in the cabinet being always ready,
And in the field a most victorious fighter,
Who for the church and Christian faith had wrought,
Certes, far more than yet is said or thought.

VI.

Guardisi ancora a san Liberatore

Quella badia là presso a Manoppello,
Giù ne gli Abbruzzi fatta per suo onore,
Dove fu la battaglia e 'l gran flaggello
D'un re pagan, che Carlo imperadore
Uccise, e tanto del suo popol fello :
E vedesi tante ossa, e tanto il sanno,
Che tutte in Giusaffa poi si vedranno.

VII.

Ma il mondo cieco e ignorante non prezza

Le sue virtù, com'io vorrei vedere :
E tu, Fiorenza, de la sua grandezza
Possiedi, e sempre potrai possedere
Ogni costume ed ogni gentilezza
Che si potesse acquistare o avere
Col senno col tesoro o con la lancia
Dal nobil sangue e venuto di Francia.

VIII.

Dodici paladini aveva in corte

Carlo ; e'l più savio e famoso era Orlando :
Gan traditor lo condusse a la morte,
In Roncisvalle, un trattato ordinando ;
Là dove il corno sonò tanto forte
Dopo la dolorosa rotta, quando
Ne la sua commedia Dante qui dice,
E mettelo con Carlo in ciel felice.

VI.

You still may see at Saint Liberatore
The abbey, no great way from Manopell,
Erected in the Abruzzi to his glory,
Because of the great battle in which fell
A pagan king, according to the story,
And felon people whom Charles sent to hell:
And there are bones so many, and so many,
Near them Giusaffa's would seem few, if any.

VII.

But the world, blind and ignorant, don't prize
His virtues as I wish to see them: thou,
Florence, by his great bounty don't arise,
And hast, and may have, if thou wilt allow,
All proper customs and true courtesies:
Whate'er thou hast acquired from then till now,
With knightly courage, treasure, or the lance,
Is sprung from out the noble blood of France.

VIII.

Twelve paladins had Charles in court, of whom
The wisest and most famous was Orlando;
Him traitor Gan conducted to the tomb
In Roncesvalles, as the villain planned too,
While the horn rang so loud, and knelled the doom
Of their sad rout, though he did all knight can do;
And Dante in his comedy has given
To him a happy seat with Charles in heaven.

IX.

Era per Pasqua quella dì natale :
Carlo la corte avea tutta in Parigi :
Orlando, com'io dico, il principale
Evvi, il Danese, Astolfo, e Ansuigi :
Fannosi feste e cose trionfale,
E molto celebravan San Dionigi;
Angiolin di Bajona, ed Olivieri
V'era venuto, e'l gentil Berlinghieri.

X.

Eravi Avolio ed Avino ed Ottone,
Di Normandia, Riccardo Paladino,
E'l savio Namo, e'l vecchio Salamone,
Gualtier da Monlione, e Baldovino
Ch'era figliuol del tristo Ganellone.
Tropo lieto era il figliuol di Pipino ;
Tanto che spesso d'allegrezza geme
Veggendo tutti i paladini insieme.

XI.

Ma la fortuna attenta sta nascosa,
Per guastar sempre ciascun nostro effetto ;
Mentre che Carlo così si riposa,
Orlando governava in fatto e in detto
La corte e Carlo Magno ed ogni cosa :
Gan per invidia scoppia il maladetto,
E cominciava un dì con Carlo a dire :
Abbiam noi sempre Orlando ad ubbidire ?

IX.

'Twas Christmas-day ; in Paris all his court
Charles held ; the chief, I say, Orlando was,
The Dane ; Astolfo there too did resort,
Also Ansuigi, the gay time to pass
In festival and in triumphal sport,
The much-renowned St. Dennis being the cause ;
Angiolin of Bayonne, and Oliver,
And gentle Belinghieri too came there :

X.

Avolio, and Arimo, and Othone
Of Normandy, and Richard Paladin,
Wise Hamo, and the ancient Salemono,
Walter of Lion's Mount and Baldovin,
Who was the son of the sad Ganellone,
Were there, exciting too much gladness in
The son of Pepin : — when his knights came hither,
He groaned with joy to see them altogether.

XI.

But watchful Fortune, lurking, takes good heed
Ever some bar 'gainst our intents to bring.
While Charles reposed him thus, in word and deed,
Orlando ruled court, Charles, and every thing ;
Curst Gan, with envy bursting, had such need
To vent his spite, that thus with Charles the king
One day he openly began to say,
" Orlando must we always then obey ?

XII.

Io ho creduto mille volte dirti :

Orlando ha in se troppa presunzione :
Noi siam qui conti, re, duchi a servirti,
E Namò, Ottone, Uggieri e Salamone,
Per onorarti ognun, per ubbidirti :
Che costui abbi ogni reputazione
Nol sofferrem ; ma siam deliberati
Da un fanciullo non esser governati.

XIII.

Tu cominciasti insino in Aspramonte

A dargli a intender che fusse gagliardo,
E facesse gran cose a quella fonte ;
Ma se non fusse stato il buon Gherardo,
Io so che la vittoria era d'Almonte :
Ma egli ebbe sempre l'occhio a lo stendardo.
Che si voleva quel dî coronarlo :
Questo è colui ch'ha meritato, Carlo.

XIV.

Se ti ricorda già sendo in Guascogna,

Quando e' vi venne la gente di Spagna,
Il popol de' cristiani avea vergogna,
Se non mostrava la sua forza magna.
Il ver convien pur dir, quando e' bisogna :
Sappi ch'ognuno imperador si lagna :
Quant'io per me, ripasserò que' monti
Ch'io passai 'n qua con sessantaduo conti.

XII.

“A thousand times I’ve been about to say,
Orlando too presumptuously goes on ;
Here are we, counts, kings, dukes, to own thy sway,
Hamo, and Otho, Ogier, Solomon,
Each have to honor thee and to obey ;
But he has too much credit near the throne,
Which we won’t suffer, but are quite decided
By such a boy to be no longer guided.

XIII.

“And even at Aspramont thou didst begin
To let him know he was a gallant knight,
And by the fount did much the day to win ;
But I know who that day had won the fight
If it had not for good Gherardo been :
The victory was Almonte’s else ; his sight
He kept upon the standard, and the laurels
In fact and fairness are his earning, Charles.

XIV.

“If thou rememberest being in Gascony,
When there advanced the nations out of Spain,
The Christian cause had suffered shamefully,
Had not his valor driven them back again.
Best speak the truth when there’s a reason why :
Know then, oh emperor ! that all complain :
As for myself, I shall repass the mounts
O’er which I crossed with two and sixty counts.

XV.

La tua grandezza dispensar si vuole,
E far che ciascun abbi la sua parte :
La corte tutta quanta se ne duole :
Tu credi che costui sia forse Marte ?
Orlando un giorno udì queste parole,
Che si sedeva soletto in disparte :
Dispiacquegli di Gan quel che diceva ;
Ma molto più che Carlo gli credeva.

XVI.

E volle con la spada uccider Gano ;
Ma Ulivieri in quel mezzo si mise,
E Durlindana gli trasse di mano,
E così il me' che seppe gli divise.
Orlando si sdegnò con Carlo Mano,
E poco men che quivi non l'uccise ;
E dipartissi di Parigi solo,
E scoppia e'mpazza di sdegno e di duolo.

XVII.

Ad Ermellina moglie del Danese
Tolse Cortana, e poi tolse Rondello ;
E 'n verso Brara il suo cammin poi prese.
Alda la bella, come vide quello,
Per abbracciarlo le braccia distese.
Orlando, che ismarrito avea il cervello,
Com'ella disse : ben venga il mio Orlando :
Gli volle in su la testa dar col brando.

XV.

"Tis fit thy grandeur should dispense relief,
So that each here may have his proper part,
For the whole court is more or less in grief:
Perhaps thou deem'st this lad a Mars in heart?"
Orlando one day heard this speech in brief,
As by himself it chanced he sate apart:
Displeased he was with Gan because he said it,
But much more still that Charles should give him credit.

XVI.

And with the sword he would have murdered Gan,
But Oliver thrust in between the pair,
And from his hand extracted Durlindan,
And thus at length they separated were.
Orlando angry too with Carloman,
Wanted but little to have slain him there;
Then forth alone from Paris went the chief,
And burst and maddened with disdain and grief.

XVII.

From Ermellina, consort of the Dane,
He took Cortana, and then took Rondell,
And on towards Brara pricked him o'er the plain;
And when she saw him coming, Aldabelle
Stretched forth her arms to clasp her lord again:
Orlando, in whose brain all was not well,
As "Welcome, my Orlando, home," she said,
Raised up his sword to smite her on the head.

XVIII.

Come colui che la furia consiglia,
Egli pareva a Gan dar veramente :
Alda la bella si fe' meraviglia :
Orlando si ravvide prestamente :
E la sua sposa pigliava la briglia,
E scese dal caval subitamente :
Ed ogni cosa narrava a costei,
E riposossi alcun giorno con lei.

XIX.

Poi si partì portato dal furore,
E terminò passare in Paganía ;
E mentre che cavalca, il traditore
Di Gan sempre ricorda per la via :
E cavalcando d'uno in altro errore,
In un deserto truova una badía
In luoghi oscuri e paesi lontani,
Ch'era a' confin' tra cristiani e pagani.

XX.

L'abate si chiamava Chiaramonte,
Era del sangue disceso d'Anglante :
Di sopra a la badía v'era un gran monte,
Dove abitava alcun fiero gigante,
De'quali uno avea nome Passamonte,
L'altro Alabastro, e'l terzo era Morgante :
Con certe frombe gittavan da alto,
Ed ogni dì facevan qualche assalto.

XVIII.

Like him a fury counsels ; his revenge
On Gan in that rash act he seemed to take,
Which Aldabella thought extremely strange ;
But soon Orlando found himself awake ;
And his spouse took his bridle on this change,
And he dismounted from his horse, and spake
Of every thing which passed without demur,
And then reposed himself some days with her.

XIX.

Then full of wrath departed from the place,
And far as pagan countries roamed astray,
And while he rode, yet still at every pace
The traitor Gan remembered by the way ;
And wandering on in error a long space,
An abbey which in a lone desert lay,
'Midst glens obscure, and distant lands, he found,
Which formed the Christian's and the pagan's bound.

XX.

The abbot was called Clermont, and by blood
Descended from Angrante : under cover
Of a great mountain's brow the abbey stood,
But certain savage giants looked him over ;
One Passamont was foremost of the brood,
And Alabaster and Morgante hover
Second and third, with certain slings, and throw
In daily jeopardy the place below.

XXI.

I monachetti non potieno uscire
Del monistero o per legne o per acque :
Orlando picchia, e non volieno aprire,
Fin che a l'abate a la fine pur piacque ;
Entrato drento cominciava a dire,
Come colui che di Maria già nacque,
Adora, ed era cristian battezzato,
E com' egli era a la badia arrivato.

XXII.

Disse l'abate : il ben venuto sia
Di quel ch'io ho volentier ti daremo,
Poi che tu credi al figliuol di Maria ;
E la cagion, cavalier, ti diremo,
Acciò che non l'imputi a villania,
Perchè a l'entrar resistenza facemo,
E non ti volle aprir quel monachetto :
Così intervien chi vive con sospetto.

XXIII.

Quando ci venni al principio abitare
Queste montagne, benchè sieno oscure
Come tu vedi ; pur si potea stare
Sanza sospetto, ch' ell' eran sicure :
Sol da le fiere t'avevi a guardare ;
Fernoci spesso di brutte paure ;
Or ci bisogna, se vogliamo starci,
Da le bestie domestiche guardarci.

XXI.

The monks could pass the convent gate no more,
Nor leave their cells for water or for wood ;
Orlando knocked, but none would ope, before
Unto the prior it at length seemed good ;
Entered, he said that he was taught to adore
Him who was born of Mary's holiest blood,
And was baptized a Christian ; and then showed
How to the abbey he had found his road.

XXII.

Said the abbot, " You are welcome ; what is mine
We give you freely, since that you believe
With us in Mary Mother's Son divine ;
And that you may not, cavalier, conceive
The cause of our delay to let you in
To be rusticity, you shall receive
The reason why our gate was barred to you :
Thus those who in suspicion live must do.

XXIII.

" When hither to inhabit first we came
These mountains, albeit that they are obscure,
As you perceive, yet without fear or blame
They seemed to promise an asylum sure :
From savage brutes alone, too fierce to tame,
'Twas fit our quiet dwelling to secure ;
But now, if here we'd stay, we needs must guard
Against domestic beasts with watch and ward.

XXIV.

Queste ci fan piuttosto stare a segno :
Sonci appariti tre fieri giganti,
Non so di qual paese o di qual regno,
Ma molto son feroci tutti quanti :
La forza e 'l malvoler giunt' a lo' ngegno
Sai che può 'l tutto ; e noi non siam bastanti ;
Questi perturban sì l'orazion nostra,
Che non so più che far, s'altri nol mostra.

XXV.

Gli antichi padri nostri nel deserto,
Se le lor opre sante erano e giuste,
Del ben servir da Dio n'avean buon merto ;
Nè creder sol vivessin di locuste :
Piovea dal ciel la manna, questo è certo ;
Ma qui convien che spesso assaggi e gusti
Sassi che piovon di sopra quel monte,
Che gettano Alabastro e Passamonte.

XXVI.

E 'l terzo ch'è Morgante, assai più fiero,
Isvegli e pini e faggi e cerri e gli oppi,
E gettagli infin qui : questo è pur vero ;
Non posso far che, d'ira non iscoppi.
Mentre che parlan così in cimitero,
Un sasso par che Rondel quasi sgroppi ;
Che da' giganti giù venne da alto
Tanto, ch'e' prese sotto il tetto un salto.

XXIV.

"These make us stand, in fact, upon the watch ;
For late therè have appeared three giants rough ;
What nation or what kingdom bore the batch
I know not, but they are all of savage stuff ;
When force and malice with some genius match,
You know, they can do all — we are not enough :
And these so much our orisons derange,
I know not what to do, till matters change.

XXV.

"Our ancient fathers living the desert in,
For just and holy works were duly fed ;
Think not they lived on locusts sole, 't is certain
That manna was rained down from heaven instead ;
But here 't is fit we keep on the alert in Our bounds, or taste the stones showered down for bread,
From off yon mountain daily raining faster,
And flung by Passamont and Alabaster.

XXVI.

"The third, Morgante's savagest by far ; he
Plucks up pines, beeches, poplar-trees, and oaks,
And flings them, our community to bury ;
And all that I can do but more provokes."
While thus they parley in the cemetery,
A stone from one of their gigantic strokes,
Which nearly crushed Rondell, came tumbling over,
So that he took a long leap under cover.

XXVII.

Tirati drento, cavalier, per Dio,
Disse l'abate, che la manna casca.
Risponde Orlando: caro abate mio,
Costui non vuol che'l mio caval più pasca:
Veggio che lo guarrebbe del restio:
Quel sasso par che di buon braccio nasca.
Rispose il santo padre: io non t'inganno,
Credo che'l monte un giorno gitteranno.

XXVIII.

Orlando governar fece Rondello,
E ordinar per se da colazione:
Poi disse: abate, io voglio andare a quello
Che dette al mio caval con quel cantone.
Disse l'abate: come car fratello
Consiglierotti senza passione:
Io ti sconforto, baron, di tal gita;
Ch'io so che tu vi lascerai la vita.

XXIX.

Quel Passamonte porta in man tre dardi:
Chi frombe, chi baston, chi mazzafrusti;
Sai che giganti più di noi gagliardi
Son per ragion, che son anco più giusti;
E pur se vuoi andar fa che ti guardi,
Che questi son villan molto e robusti.
Rispose Orlando: io lo vedrò per certo;
Ed avviossi a piè su pel deserto.

XXVII.

"For God-sake, cavalier, come in with speed ;
The manna 's falling now," the abbot cried.
"This fellow does not wish my horse should feed,
Dear abbot," Roland unto him replied.
"Of restiveness he 'd cure him had he need ;
That stone seems with good will and aim applied."
The holy father said, "I don't deceive ;
They 'll one day fling the mountain, I believe."

XXVIII.

Orlando bade them take care of Rondello,
And also made a breakfast of his own :
"Abbot," he said, "I want to find that fellow
Who flung at my good horse yon corner-stone."
Said the abbot, "Let not my advice seem shallow ;
As to a brother dear I speak alone ;
I would dissuade you, baron, from this strife,
As knowing sure that you will lose your life."

XXIX.

"That Passamont has in his hand three darts —
Such slings, clubs, ballast-stones, that yield you must ;
You know that giants have much stouter hearts
Than us, with reason, in proportion just :
If go you will, guard well against their arts,
For these are very barbarous and robust."
Orlando answered, "This I 'll see, be sure,
And walk the wild on foot to be secure."

XXX.

Disse l'abate col segnarlo in fronte :
Va, che da Dio e me sia benedetto.
Orlando, poi che salito ebbe il monte,
Si dirizzò, come l'abate detto
Gli avea, dove sta quel Passamonte ;
Il quale Orlando veggendo soletto,
Molto lo squadra di dietro e davante ;
Poi domandò, se star volea per fante.

XXXI.

E' prometteva di farlo godere.
Orlando disse: pazzo saracino,
Io vengo a te, com'è di Dio volere,
Per darti morte, e non per ragazzino ;
A' monaci suoi fatto hai dispiacere ;
Non può più comportarti, can mastino.
Questo gigante armar si corse a furia,
Quando sentì ch'e'gli diceva ingiuria.

XXXII.

E ritornato ove aspettava Orlando,
Il qual non s'era partito da bomba ;
Subito venne la corda girando,
E lascia un sasso andar fuor de la fromba,
Che in su la testa giugnea rotolando
Al conte Orlando, e l'elmetto rimbomba ;
E' caddo per la pena tramortito ;
Ma più che morto par, tanto è stordito.

XXX.

The abbot signed the great cross on his front,
 "Then go you with God's benison and mine:"
Orlando, after he had scaled the mount,
 As the abbot had directed, kept the line
Right to the usual haunt of Passamont;
 Who, seeing him alone in this design,
Surveyed him fore and aft with eyes observant,
Then asked him, "If he wished to stay as servant?"

XXXI.

And promised him an office of great ease.
 But, said Orlando, "Saracen insane!
I come to kill you, if it shall so please
 God, not to serve as footboy in your train;
You with his monks so oft have broke the peace —
 Vile dog! 'tis past his patience to sustain."
The giant ran to fetch his arms, quite furious,
When he received an answer so injurious.

XXXII.

And being returned to where Orlando stood,
 Who had not moved him from the spot, and swinging
The cord, he hurled a stone with strength so rude,
 As showed a sample of his skill in slinging;
It rolled on Count Orlando's helmet good
 And head, and set both head and helmet ringing,
So that he swooned with pain as if he died,
But more than dead, he seemed so stupefied.

XXXIII.

Passamonte pensò che fusse morto,
E disse: io voglio andarmi a disarmare:
Questo poltron per chi m'aveva scorto?
Ma Cristo i suoi non suole abbandonare,
Massime Orlando, ch'egli arebbe il torto.
Mentre il gigante l'arme va a spogliare,
Orlando in questo tempo si risente,
E rievocava e la forza e la mente.

XXXIV.

E gridò forte: gigante, ove vai?
Ben ti pensasti d'avermi ammazzato!
Volgiti a dietro, che, s'ale non hai,
Non puoi da me fuggir, can rinnegato:
A tradimento ingiuriato m'hai.
Donde il gigante allor maravigliato
Si volse a dietro, e riteneva il passo;
Poi si chinò per tor di terra un sasso.

XXXV.

Orlando avea Cortana ignuda in mano;
Trasse a la testa: e Cortana tagliava:
Per mezzo il teschio partì del pagano,
E Passamonte morto rovinava:
E nel cadere il superbo e villano
Divotamente Macon bestemmiava;
Ma mentre che bestemmia il crudo e acerbo,
Orlando ringraziava il Padre e'l Verbo.

XXXIII.

Then Passamont, who thought him slain outright,
Said, "I will go, and while he lies along,
Disarm me: why such craven did I fight?"

But Christ his servants ne'er abandons long,
Especially Orlando, such a knight,

As to desert would almost be a wrong.
While the giant goes to put off his defences,
Orlando has recalled his force and senses:

XXXIV.

And loud he shouted, "Giant, where dost go?
Thou thought'st me doubtless for the bier outlaid;
To the right about — without wings thou'r't too slow
To fly my vengeance — currish renegade!
'Twas but by treachery thou laid'st me low."

The giant his astonishment betrayed,
And turned about, and stopped his journey on,
And then he stooped to pick up a great stone.

XXXV.

Orlando had Cortana bare in hand;
To split the head in twain was what he schemed: —
Cortana clave the skull like a true brand,
And pagan Passamont died unredeemed,
Yet harsh and haughty, as he lay he banned,
And most devoutly Macon still blasphemed;
But while his crude, rude blasphemies he heard,
Orlando thanked the Father and the Word, —

XXXVI.

Dicendo : quanta grazia oggi m' ha' data !
Sempre ti sono, o signor mio, tenuto ;
Per te conosco la vita salvata ;
Però che dal gigante era abbattuto :
Ogni cosa a ragion fai misurata ;
Non val nostro poter senza il tuo ajuto.
Priegoti, sopra me tenga la mano,
Tanto che ancor ritorni a Carlo Mano.

XXXVII.

Poi ch'ebbe questo detto sen' andò,
Tanto che trouva Alabastro più basso
Che si sforzava, quando e' lo trovò,
Di svegliar d'una ripa fuori un masso.
Orlando, com'e' giunse a quel, gridò :
Che pensi tu, ghiotton, gittar quel sasso
Quando Alabastro questo grido intende,
Subitamente la sua fromba prende.

XXXVIII.

E' trasse d'una pietra molto grossa,
Tanto ch'Orlando bisognò schermisse ;
Che se l'avesse giunto la percossa,
Non bisognava il medico venisse.
Orlando adoperò poi la sua possa ;
Nel pettignon tutta la spada misse :
E morto cadde questo badalone,
E non dimenticò però Macone.

XXXVI.

Saying, "What grace to me thou 'st this day given!

And I to thee, oh Lord! am ever bound.

I know my life was saved by thee from heaven,

Since by the giant I was fairly downed.

All things by thee are measured just and even;

Our power without thine aid would nought be

I pray thee take heed of me, till I can [found:

At least return once more to Carloman."

XXXVII.

And having said thus much, he went his way;

And Alabaster he found out below,

Doing the very best that in him lay

To root from out a bank a rock or two.

Orlando, when he reached him, loud 'gan say,

"How think'st thou, glutton, such a stone to throw?"

When Alabaster heard his deep voice ring,

He suddenly betook him to his sling,

XXXVIII.

And hurled a fragment of a size so large,

That if it had in fact fulfilled its mission,

And Roland not availed him of his targe,

There would have been no need of a physician.

Orlando set himself in turn to charge,

And in his bulky bosom made incision

With all his sword. The lout fell; but o'erthrown, he

However by no means forgot Macone.

XXXIX.

Morgante aveva al suo modo un palagio
Fatto di frasche e di schegge e di terra :
Quivi, secondo lui, si posa ad agio ;
Quivi la notte si rinchiude e serra.
Orlando picchia, e daragli disagio,
Perchè il gigante dal sonno si sferra ;
Vennegli aprir come una cosa matta ;
Ch'un' aspra visione aveva fatta.

XL.

E' gli pareva ch'un feroce serpente
L'avea assalito, e chiamar Macometto ;
Ma Macometto non valea niente :
Ond'e' chiamava Gesù benedetto ;
E liberato l'avea finalmente.
Venne alla porta, ed ebbe così detto ;
Chi buzza qua ? pur sempre borbottando.
Tu 'l saprai tosto, gli rispose Orlando.

XLI.

Vengo per farti, come a' tuo' fratelli,
Far de' peccati tuoi la penitènzia,
Da' monaci mandato, cattivelli,
Come stato è divina provvidenzia ;
Pel mal ch'avete fatto a torto a quelli,
È dato in ciel così questa sentenza ;
Sappi, che freddo già più ch'un pilastro
Lasciato ho Passamonte e'l tuo Alabastro.

XXXIX.

Morgante had a palace in his mode,
Composed of branches, logs of wood, and earth,
And stretched himself at ease in this abode,
And shut himself at night within his berth.
Orlando knocked, and knocked again, to goad
The giant from his sleep ; and he came forth,
The door to open, like a crazy thing,
For a rough dream had shook him slumbering.

XL.

He thought that a fierce serpent had attacked him ;
And Mahomet he called ; but Mahomet
Is nothing worth, and not an instant backed him ;
But praying blessed Jesu, he was set
At liberty from all the fears which racked him ;
And to the gate he came with great regret —
“Who knocks here?” grumbling all the while, said he.
“That,” said Orlando, “you will quickly see.

XLI.

“I come to preach to you, as to your brothers,
Sent by the miserable monks — repentance ;
For Providence divine, in you and others,
Condemns the evil done my new acquaintance.
’T is writ on high — your wrong must pay another’s ;
From heaven itself is issued out this sentence.
Know then, that colder now than a pilaster
I left your Passamont and Alabaster.”

XLII.

Disse Morgante : o gentil cavaliere,
Per lo tuo Dio non mi dir villania :
Di grazia il nome tuo vorrei sapere ;
Se se' Cristian, deh dillo in cortesia.
Rispose Orlando : di cotal mestiere
Contenterotti per la fede mia :
Adoro Cristo, ch'è Signor verace ;
E puoi tu adorarlo, se ti piace.

XLIII.

Rispose il saracin con umil voce :
Io ho fatto una strana visione,
Che m'assaliva un serpente feroce :
Non mi valeva per chiamar Macone ;
Onde al tuo Dio che fu confitto in croce
Rivolsi presto la mia intenzione :
E' mi soccorse, e fui libero e sano,
E son disposto al tutto esser Cristiano.

XLIV.

Rispose Orlando : baron giusto e pio,
Se questo buon voler terrai nel core,
L'anima tua arà quel vero Dio
Che ci può sol gradir d'eterno onore :
E s'tu vorrai, sarai compagno mio,
E amerotti con perfetto amore :
Gl'idoli vostri son bugiardi e vani :
Il vero Dio è lo Dio de' Cristiani.

XLII.

Morgante said, "Oh gentle cavalier!
Now by thy God say me no villany;
The favor of your name I fain would hear,
And if a Christian, speak for courtesy."
Replied Orlando, "So much to your ear
I by my faith disclose contentedly;
Christ I adore, who is the genuine Lord,
And, if you please, by you may be adored."

XLIII.

The Saracen rejoined in humble tone,
"I have had an extraordinary vision;
A savage serpent fell on me alone,
And Macon would not pity my condition;
Hence to thy God, who for ye did atone
Upon the cross, preferred I my petition;
His timely succor set me safe and free,
And I a Christian am disposed to be."

XLIV.

Orlando answered, "Baron just and pious,
If this good wish your heart can really move
To the true God, who will not then deny us
Eternal honor, you will go above,
And, if you please, as friends we will ally us,
And I will love you with a perfect love.
Your idols are vain liars, full of fraud:
The only true God is the Christian's God.

XLV.

Venne questo Signor senza peccato
Ne la sua madre vergine pulzella:
Se conoscessi quel Signor beato,
Sanza'l qual non risplende sole o stella,
Aresti già Macon tuo rinnegato,
E la sua fede iniqua ingiusta e fella:
Battezzati al mio Dio di buon talento.
Morgante gli rispose: io son contento.

XLVI.

E corse Orlando subito abbracciare:
Orlando gran carezze gli facea,
E disse: a la badia ti vo' menare.
Morgante, andianci presto, respondea:
Co' monaci la pace ci vuol fare.
De la qual cosa Orlando in se godea,
Dicendo; fratel mio divoto e buono,
Io vò che chiegga a l' abate perdono.

XLVII.

Da poi che Dio ralluminato t'ha,
Ed accettato per la sua umiltade;
Vuolsi che tu ancor usi umiltà.
Disse Morgante: per la tua bontade,
Poi che il tuo Dio mio sempre omai sarà,
Dimmio del nome tuo la veritade,
Poi di me dispor puoi al tuo comando;
Ond' e' gli disse, com' egli era Orlando.

XLV.

"The Lord descended to the virgin breast
Of Mary Mother, sinless and divine;
If you acknowledge the Redeemer blest,
Without whom neither sun nor star can shine,
Abjure bad Macon's false and felon test,
Your renegado god, and worship mine, —
Baptize yourself with zeal, since you repent."
To which Morgante answered, "I'm content."

XLVI.

And then Orlando to embrace him flew,
And made much of his convert, as he cried,
"To the abbey I will gladly marshal you."
To whom Morgante, "Let us go," replied;
"I to the friars have for peace to sue."
Which thing Orlando heard with inward pride,
Saying, "My brother, so devout and good,
Ask the abbot pardon, as I wish you would:

XLVII.

"Since God has granted your illumination,
Accepting you in mercy for his own,
Humility should be your first oblation."
Morgante said, "For goodness' sake, make known—
Since that your God is to be mine — your station,
And let your name in verity be shown;
Then will I every thing at your command do."
On which the other said, he was Orlando.

XLVIII.

Disse il gigante: Gesù benedetto
Per mille volte ringraziato sia;
Sentito t'ho nomar, baron perfetto,
Per tutti i tempi de la vita mia:
E, com'io dissi, sempremai soggetto
Esser ti vo' per la tua gagliardia.
Insieme molte cose ragionaro,
E 'n verso la badia poi s'inviarò.

XLIX.

E per la via da que' giganti morti
Orlando con Morgante sì ragiona:
De la lor morte vo' che ti conforti;
E poi che piace a Dio, a me perdona;
A' monaci avean fatto mille torti;
E la nostra scrittura aperto suona:
Il ben remunerato, e'l mal punito;
E mai non ha questo Signor fallito:

L.

Però ch'egli ama la giustizia tanto,
Che vuol, che sempre il suo giudicio morda
Ognun ch'abbi peccato tanto o quanto;
E così il ben ristorar si ricorda:
E non saria senza giustizia santo:
Adunque al suo voler presto t'accorda:
Che debbe ognun voler quel che vuol questo,
Ed accordarsi volentieri e presto.

XLVIII.

"Then," quoth the giant, "blessed be Jesu
A thousand times with gratitude and praise!
Oft, perfect baron! have I heard of you
Through all the different periods of my days:
And, as I said, to be your vassal too
I wish, for your great gallantry always."
Thus reasoning, they continued much to say,
And onwards to the abbey went their way.

XLIX.

And by the way about the giants dead
Orlando with Morgante reasoned: "Be,
For their decease, I pray you, comforted;
And, since it is God's pleasure, pardon me,
A thousand wrongs unto the monks they bred,
And our true Scripture soundeth openly,
Good is rewarded, and chastised the ill,
Which the Lord never faileth to fulfil:

L.

"Because his love of justice unto all
Is such, he wills his judgment should devour
All who have sin, however great or small:
But good he well remembers to restore.
Nor without justice holy could we call
Him, whom I now require you to adore.
All men must make his will their wishes sway,
And quickly and spontaneously obey.

LL.

E sonsi i nostri dottori accordati,
Pigliando tutti una conclusione,
Che que' che son nel ciel glorificati,
S'avessin nel pensier compassione
De' miseri parenti che dannati
Son ne lo inferno in gran confusione,
La lor felicità nulla sarebbe ;
E vedi che qui ingiusto Iddio parrebbe.

LII.

Ma egli anno posto in Gesù ferma spene ;
E tanto pare a lor, quanto a lui pare ;
Afferman ciò ch'e'fa, che facci bene,
E che non possi in nessun modo errare :
Se padre o madre è nell' eterne pene,
Di questo non si posson conturbare :
Che quel che piace a Dio, sol piace a loro :
Questo s'osserva ne l'eterno coro.

LIII.

Al savio suol bastar poche parole,
Disse Morgante ; tu il potrai vedere,
De' miei fratelli, Orlando, se mi duole,
E s' io m'accorderò di Dio al volere,
Come tu di' che in ciel servir si suole :
Morti co' morti ; or pensiam di godere ;
Io vo tagliar le mani a tutti quanti,
E porterolle a que' monaci santi,

LI.

“ And here our doctors are of one accord,
Coming on this point to the same conclusion, —
That in their thoughts who praise in heaven the Lord,
If pity e’er was guilty of intrusion
For their unfortunate relations stored
In hell below, and damned in great confusion, —
Their happiness would be reduced to nought,
And thus unjust the Almighty’s self be thought.

LII.

“ But they in Christ have firmest hope, and all
Which seems to him, to them too must appear
Well done ; nor could it otherwise befall :
He never can in any purpose err.
If sire or mother suffer endless thrall,
They don’t disturb themselves for him or her ;
What pleases God to them must joy inspire ; —
Such is the observance of the eternal choir.”

LIII.

“ A word unto the wise,” Morgante said,
“ Is wont to be enough, and you shall see
How much I grieve about my brethren dead ;
And if the will of God seem good to me,
Just, as you tell me, ’t is in heaven obeyed —
Ashes to ashes, — merry let us be !
I will cut off the hands from both their trunks,
And carry them unto the holy monks.

LIV.

Acciò ch'ognun sia più sicuro e certo,
Com' e' son morti, e non abbin paura
Andar soletti per questo deserto ;
E perchè veggan la mia mente pura
A quel Signor che m'ha il suo regno aperto,
E tratto fuor di tenebre sì oscura.
E poi tagliò le mani a' due fratelli,
E lasciagli a le fiere ed agli uccelli.

LV.

A la badia insieme se ne vanno,
Ove l'abate assai dubbioso aspetta :
I monaci che'l fatto ancor non sanno,
Correvano a l'abate tutti in fretta,
Dicendo paurosi e pien' d'affanno :
Volete voi costui drento si metta ?
Quando l'abate vedeva il gigante,
Si turbò tutto nel primo sembiante.

LVI.

Orlando che turbato così il vede,
Gli disse presto : abate, datti pace,
Questo è Cristiano, e in Cristo nostro crede,
E rinnegato ha il suo Macon fallace.
Morgante i moncherin mostrò per fede,
Come i giganti ciascun morto giace ;
Donde l'abate ringraziavia Iddio,
Dicendo ; or m' hai contento, Signor mio.

LIV.

"So that all persons may be sure and certain
That they are dead, and have no further fear
To wander solitary this desert in,

And that they may perceive my spirit clear
By the Lord's grace, who hath withdrawn the curtain
Of darkness, making his bright realm appear."
He cut his brethren's hands off at these words,
And left them to the savage beasts and birds.

LV.

Then to the abbey they went on together,
Where waited them the abbot in great doubt.
The monks who knew not yet the fact, ran thither
To their superior, all in breathless rout, Saying with tremor, "Please to tell us whether You wish to have this person in or out?"
The abbot, looking through upon the giant,
Too greatly feared, at first, to be compliant.

LVI.

Orlando seeing him thus agitated,
Said quickly, "Abbot, be thou of good cheer ;
He Christ believes, as Christian must be rated,
And hath renounced his Macon false ;" which here
Morgante with the hands corroborated,
A proof of both the giants' fate quite clear :
Thence, with due thanks, the abbot God adored,
Saying, "Thou hast contented me, oh Lord !"

LVII.

E riguardava, e squadrava Morgante,
La sua grandezza e una volta e due,
E poi gli disse: O famoso gigante,
Sappi ch'io non mi maraviglio più,
Che tu svegliessi e gittassi le piante,
Quand'io riguardo or le fattezze tue:
Tu sarai or perfetto e vero amico
A Cristo, quanto tu gli eri nimico.

LVIII.

Un nostro apostol, Saul già chiamato,
Perseguì molto la fede di Cristo:
Un giorno poi da lo spirito infiammato,
Perchè pur mi persegui? disse Cristo:
E' sì ravvide allor del suo peccato;
Andò poi predicando sempre Cristo;
E fatto è or de la fede una tromba,
La qual per tutto risuona e rimbomba.

LIX.

Così farai tu ancor, Morgante mio:
E chi s'emenda, è scritto nel Vangelo,
Che maggior festa fa d'un solo Iddio,
Che di novantanove altri su in cielo:
Io ti conforto ch'ogni tuo disio
Rivolga a quel Signor con giusto zelo,
Che tu sarai felice in sempiterno,
Ch'eri perduto, e dannato all' inferno.

LVII.

He gazed ; Morgante's height he calculated,
And more than once contemplated his size ;
And then he said, " Oh giant celebrated !
Know, that no more my wonder will arise,
How you could tear and fling the trees you late did,
When I behold your form with my own eyes.
You now a true and perfect friend will show
Yourself to Christ, as once you were a foe.

LVIII.

" And one of our apostles, Saul once named,
Long persecuted sore the faith of Christ,
Till, one day, by the Spirit being inflamed,
' Why dost thou persecute me thus ? ' said Christ ;
And then from his offence he was reclaimed,
And went for ever after preaching Christ,
And of the faith became a trump, whose sounding
O'er the whole earth is echoing and rebounding.

LIX.

" So, my Morgante, you may do likewise ;
He who repents — thus writes the Evangelist —
Occasions more rejoicing in the skies
Than ninety-nine of the celestial list.
You may be sure, should each desire arise
With just zeal for the Lord, that you 'll exist
Among the happy saints for evermore ;
But you were lost and damned to hell before !

LX.

E grande onore a Morgante faceva
L'abate, e molti dì si son posati :
Un giorno, come ad Orlando piaceva,
A spasso in quà e in là si sono andati :
L'abate in una camera sua aveva
Molta armadure e certi archi appiccati :
Morgante gliene piacque un che ne vede ;
Onde e' sel cinse bench' oprar nol crede.

LXI.

Avea quel luogo d'acqua carestia :
Orlando disse come buon fratello,
Morgante, vo' che di piacer ti sia
Andar per l'acqua ; ond' e' rispose a quello :
Comanda ciò che vuoi che fatto sia ;
E posesi in ispalla un gran tinello,
Ed avviossi là verso una fonte
Dove solea ber sempre appiè del monte.

LXII.

Giunto a la fonte, sente un gran fracasso
Di subito venir per la foresta :
Una saetta cavò del turcasso,
Posela a l'arco, ed alzava la testa ;
Ecco apparire un gran gregge al passo
Di porci, e vanno con molta tempesta ;
E arrivorno alla fontana appunto
Dove il gigante è da lor sopraggiunto.

LX.

And thus great honor to Morgante paid
The abbot: many days they did repose.
One day, as with Orlando they both strayed,
And sauntered here and there, where'er they chose,
The abbot showed a chamber, where arrayed
Much armor was, and hung up certain bows;
And one of these Morgante for a whim
Girt on, though useless, he believed, to him.

LXI.

There being a want of water in the place,
Orlando, like a worthy brother, said,
"Morgante, I could wish you in this case
To go for water." "You shall be obeyed
In all commands," was the reply, "straightways."
Upon his shoulder a great tub he laid,
And went out on his way unto a fountain,
Where he was wont to drink below the mountain.

LXII.

Arrived there, a prodigious noise he hears,
Which suddenly along the forest spread;
Whereat from out his quiver he prepares
An arrow for his bow, and lifts his head;
And lo! a monstrous herd of swine appears,
And onward rushes with tempestuous tread,
And to the fountain's brink precisely pours;
So that the giant's joined by all the boars.

LXIII.

Morgante a la ventura a un saetta ;
 Appunto ne l'orecchio lo 'ncarnava ;
 Da l'altro lato passò la verretta ;
 Onde il cinghial giù morto gambettava ;
 Un altro, quasi per farne vendetta,
 Addosso al gran gigante irato andava ;
 E perchè e' giunse troppo tosto al varco,
 Non fu Morgante a tempo a trar con l'arco.

LXIV.

Vedendosi venuto il porco adosso,
 Gli dette in su la testa un gran punzone *
 Per modo che gl'infranse insino a l'osso,
 E morto allato a quell'altro lo pone :
 Gli altri porci veggendo quel percosso,
 Si misson tutti in fuga pel vallone ;
 Morgante si levò il tinello in collo,
 Ch'era pien d'acqua, e non si muove un crollo.

LXV.

Da l'una spalla il tinello avea posto,
 Da l'altra i porci, e spacciava il terreno ;
 E torna a la badia, ch'è pur discosto
 Ch' una gocciola d'acqua non va in seno.
 Orlando che'l vedea tornar sì tosto
 Co' porci morti, e con quel vaso pieno,
 Maravigliossi che sia tanto forte ;
 Così l'abate ; e spalancan le porte.

* "Gli dette in su la testa un gran punzone." It is strange that Pulci should have literally anticipated the technical terms of my old friend and master, Jackson, and the art which he has

LXIII.

Morgante at a venture shot an arrow,
 Which pierced a pig precisely in the ear,
 And passed unto the other side quite thorough ;
 So that the boar, defunct, lay tripped up near.
 Another, to revenge his fellow farrow,
 Against the giant rushed in fierce career,
 And reached the passage with so swift a foot,
 Morgante was not now in time to shoot.

LXIV.

Perceiving that the pig was on him close,
 He gave him such a punch upon the head
 As floored him so that he no more arose,
 Smashing the very bone ; and he fell dead
 Next to the other. Having seen such blows,
 The other pigs along the valley fled ;
 Morgante on his neck the bucket took,
 Full from the spring, which neither swerved nor shook.

LXV.

The ton was on one shoulder, and there were
 The hogs on t'other, and he brushed apace
 On to the abbey, though by no means near,
 Nor spilt one drop of water in his race.
 Orlando, seeing him so soon appear
 With the dead boars, and with that brimful vase, marvelled to see his strength so very great ;
 So did the abbot, and set wide the gate.
 carried to its highest pitch. "A punch on the head," or "a punch in the head," — "un punzone in su la testa," — is the exact and frequent phrase of our best pugilists, who little dream that they are talking the purest Tuscan.

LXVI.

I monaci veggendo l'acqua fresea
Si rallegrorno, ma più de' cinghiali;
Ch'ogni animal si rallegra de l'esca;
E posano a dormire i breviali:
Ognun s'affanna, e non par che gl'incresca,
Acciò che questa carne non s'insali,
E che poi secca sapesse di vieto:
E la digiune si restorno a drieto.

LXVII.

E ferno a scoppia corpo per un tratto,
E scuffian, che parien de l'acqua usciti;
Tanto che'l cane sen doleva e 'l gatto,
Che gli ossi rimanean troppo puliti.
L'abate, poi che molto onoro ha fatto
A tutti, un dì dopo questi conviti
Dette a Morgante un destrier molto bello,
Che lungo tempo tenuto avea quello.

LXVIII.

Morgante in su 'n un prato il caval mena,
E vuol che corra, e che facci ogni pruova,
E pensa che di ferro abbi la schiena,
O forse non credeva schiacciar l'uova:
Questo caval s'accoscia per la pena,
E scoppia, e 'n su la terra si ritruova.
Dicea Morgante: lieva su, rozzone;
E va pur punzecchiando con lo sprone.

.LXVI.

The monks, who saw the water fresh and good,
Rejoiced, but much more to perceive the pork;—
All animals are glad at sight of food :
They lay their breviaries to sleep, and work
With greedy pleasure, and in such a mood,
That the flesh needs no salt beneath their fork.
Of rankness and of rot there is no fear,
For all the fasts are now left in arrear.

LXVII.

As though they wished to burst at once, they ate ;
And gorged so that, as if the bones had been
In water, sorely grieved the dog and cat,
Perceiving that they all were picked too clean.
The abbot, who to all did honor great,
A few days after this convivial scene,
Gave to Morgante a fine horse, well trained,
Which he long time had for himself maintained.

LXVIII.

The horse Morgante to a meadow led,
To gallop, and to put him to the proof,
Thinking that he a back of iron had,
Or to skim eggs unbroke was light enough ;
But the horse, sinking with the pain, fell dead,
And burst, while cold on earth lay head and hoof.
Morgante said, " Get up, thou sulky cur !"
And still continued pricking with the spur.

LXIX.

Ma finalmente convien ch' egli smonte,
E disse : io son pur leggier come penna,
Ed è scoppiato ; che ne di' tu, conte ?
Rispose Orlando : un arbore d'antenna
Mi par piuttosto, e la gaggia la fronte :
Lascialo andar, che la fortuna accenna
Che meco appiede ne venga, Morgante.
Ed io così verrò, disse il gigante.

LXX.

Quando sarà mestier, tu mi vedrai
Com'io mi proverò ne la battaglia.
Orlando disse : io credo tu farai
Come buon cavalier, se Dio mi vaglia ;
Ed anco me dormir non mirerai :
Di questo tuo caval non te ne caglia :
Vorrebbesi portarlo in qualche bosco ;
Ma il modo nè la via non ci conosco.

LXXI.

Disse il gigante : io il porterò ben io,
Da poi che portar me non ha voluto,
Per render ben per mal, come fa Dio ;
Ma vo' che a porlo addosso mi dia ajuto.
Orlando gli dicea : Morgante mio,
S'al mio consiglio ti sarai attenuto,
Questo caval tu non ve 'l porteresti,
Che ti farà come tu a lui facesti,

LXIX.

But finally he thought fit to dismount,

And said, "I am as light as any feather,
And he has burst ; — to this what say you, count ?"

Orlando answered, "Like a ship's mast rather
You seem to me, and with the truck for front : —

Let him go ; Fortune wills that we together
Should march, but you on foot Morgante still."
To which the giant answered, "So I will.

LXX.

"When there shall be occasion, you will see How I approve my courage in the fight."

Orlando said, "I really think you'll be,
If it should prove God's will, a goodly knight ;
Nor will you napping there discover me.

But never mind your horse, though out of sight
'T were best to carry him into some wood,
If but the means or way I understood."

LXXI.

The giant said, "Then carry him I will,
Since that to carry me he was so slack —
To render, as the gods do, good for ill ;

But lend a hand to place him on my back."
Orlando answered, "If my counsel still
May weigh, Morgante, do not undertake
To lift or carry this dead courser, who,
As you have done to him, will do to you.

LXXII.

Guarda che non facesse la vendetta,
Come fece già Nesso così morto :
Non so se la sua istoria hai inteso o letta :
E' ti farà scoppiar ; datti conforto.
Disse Morgante : ajuta ch'io me 'l metta
Addosso, e poi vedrai s'io ve lo porto :
Io porterei, Orlando mio gentile,
Con le campane la quel campanile.

LXXIII.

Disse l'abate : il campanil v'è bene ;
Ma le campane voi l'avete rotte.
Dicea Morgante, e' ne porton le pene
Color che morti son là in quelle grotte ;
E levossi il cavallo in su le schiene,
E disse : guarda s'io sento di gotte,
Orlando, nelle gambe, e s' io lo posso ;
E fe' duo salti col cavallo addosso.

LXXIV.

Era Morgante come una montagna :
Se faceva questo, non è maraviglia :
Ma pure Orlando con seco si lagna ;
Perchè pur era omai di sua famiglia,
Temenza avea non pigliasse magagna.
Un' altra volta costui riconsiglia :
Posalo ancor, nol portare al deserto.
Disse Morgante : il porterò per certo.

LXXII.

"Take care he don't revenge himself, though dead,
As Nessus did of old beyond all cure.
I don't know if the fact you've heard or read ;
But he will make you burst, you may be sure."
"But help him on my back," Morgante said,
"And you shall see what weight I can endure.
In place, my gentle Roland, of this palfrey,
With all the bells, I'd carry yonder belfry."

LXXIII.

The abbot said, "The steeple may do well,
But, for the bells, you've broken them, I wot."
Morgante answered, "Let them pay in hell
The penalty who lie dead in yon grot ;"
And hoisting up the horse from where he fell,
He said, "Now look if I the gout have got,
Orlando, in the legs — or if I have force ;" —
And then he made two gambols with the horse.

LXXIV.

Morgante was like any mountain framed ;
So if he did this, 't is no prodigy ;
But secretly himself Orlando blamed,
Because he was one of his family ;
And fearing that he might be hurt or maimed,
Once more he bade him lay his burden by :
"Put down, nor bear him further the desert in."
Morgante said, "I'll carry him for certain."

LXXV.

E portollo, e gittollo in luogo strano,
E tornò a la badia subitamente.
Diceva Orlando : or che più dimoriano ?
Morgante, qui non facciam noi niente.
E prese un giorno l'abate per mano,
E disse a quel molto discretamente,
Che vuol partir de la sua reverenzia,
E domandava e perdono e licenzia.

LXXVI.

E de gli onor ricevuti da questi,
Qualche volta potendo, arà buon merito ;
E dice : io intendo ristorare e presto
I persi giorni del tempo preterito :
E' son più dì che licenzia arei chiesto,
Benigno padre, se non ch' io mi perito ;
Non so mostrarvi quel che drento sento ;
Tanto vi veggo del mio star contento.

LXXVII.

Io me ne porto per sempre nel core
L'abate, la badia, questo deserto ;
Tanto v'ho posto in picciol tempo amore :
Rendavi su nel ciel per me buon merto
Quel vero Dio, quello eterno Signore
Che vi serba il suo regno al fine aperto :
Noi aspettiam vostra benedizione,
Raccomandiamci a le vostre orazione.

LXXV.

He did ; and stowed him in some nook away,
And to the abbey then returned with speed.
Orlando said, " Why longer do we stay ?
Morgante, here is nought to do indeed."
The abbot by the hand he took one day,
And said, with great respect, he had agreed
To leave his reverence ; but for this decision
He wished to have his pardon and permission.

LXXVI.

The honors they continued to receive
Perhaps exceeded what his merits claimed :
He said, " I mean, and quickly, to retrieve
The lost days of time past, which may be blamed ;
Some days ago I should have asked your leave,
Kind father, but I really was ashamed,
And know not how to show my sentiment,
So much I see you with our stay content.

LXXVII.

" But in my heart I bear through every clime
The abbot, abbey, and this solitude —
So much I love you in so short a time ;
For me, from heaven reward you with all good
The God so true, the eternal Lord sublime !
Whose kingdom at the last hath open stood.
Meantime we stand expectant of your blessing,
And recommend us to your prayers with pressing."

LXXVIII.

Quando l'abate il conte Orlando intese,
Rintenerò nel cor per la dolcezza,
Tanto fervor nel petto se gli accese ;
E disse : cavalier, se a tua prodezza
Non sono stato benigno e cortese,
Come conviensi a la gran gentillezza,
Che so che ciò ch'ïho fatto è stato poco,
Incolpa la ignoranzia nostra e il loco.

LXXIX.

Noi ti potremo di messe onorare,
Di prediche, di laude, e paternostri,
Piuttosto che da cena o desinare,
O d'altri convenevol che da chiostri.
Tu m'hai di te sì fatto innamorare
Per mille alte excellenzie che tu mostri,
Ch'io me ne vengo ove tu andrai con teco ;
E d'altra parte tu resti quì meco.

LXXX.

Tanto ch'a questo par contraddizione ;
Ma so che tu se' savio, e 'ntendi e gusti,
E intendi il mio parlar per discrizione.
De' beneficj tuoi pietosi e giusti
Renda il Signore a te munerazione,
Da cui mandato in queste selve fusti ;
Per le virtù del qual liberi siamo,
E grazie a lui e a te noi ne rendiamo.

LXXVIII.

Now when the abbot Count Orlando heard,
His heart grew soft with inner tenderness,
Such fervor in his bosom bred each word ;
And, " Cavalier," he said, " if I have less
Courteous and kind to your great worth appeared,
Than fits me for such gentle blood to express,
I know I have done too little in this case ;
But blame our ignorance, and this poor place.

LXXIX.

" We can indeed but honor you with masses,
And sermons, thanksgivings, and pater-nosters,
Hot suppers, dinners (fitting other places
In verity much rather than the cloisters) ;
But such a love for you my heart embraces,
For thousand virtues which your bosom fosters,
That wheresoe'er you go I too shall be,
And, on the other part, you rest with me.

LXXX.

" This may involve a seeming contradiction ;
But you I know are sage, and feel, and taste,
And understand my speech with full conviction.
For your just pious deeds may you be graced
With the Lord's great reward and benediction,
By whom you were directed to this waste :
To his high mercy is our freedom due,
For which we render thanks to him and you.

LXXXI.

Tu ci hai salvato l'anima e la vita :
Tanta perturbazion già que' giganti
Ci detton, che la strada era smarrita
Da ritrovar Gesù con gli altri santi.
Però troppo ci duol la tua partita,
E sconsolati restiam tutti quanti ;
Nè ritener possiamti i mesi e gli anni :
Che tu non se' da vestir questi panni,

LXXXII.

Ma da portar la lancia e l' armadura :
E puossi meritar con essa, come
Con questa cappa ; e leggi la scrittura :
Questo gigante al ciel drizzò le some
Per tua virtù ; va in pace a tua ventura
Chi tu ti sia, ch'io non ricerco il nome ;
Ma dirò sempre, s'io son domandato,
Ch' un angiol qui da Dio fussi mandato.

LXXXIII.

Se c'è armadura o cosa che tu voglia,
Vattene in zambra e pigliane tu stessi,
E cuopri a questo gigante le scoglia.
Rispose Orlando : se armadura avessi
Prima che noi uscissim de la soglia,
Che questo mio compagno difendessi,
Questo accetto io, e sarammi piacere.
Disse l'abate : venite a vedere.

LXXXI.

"You saved at once our life and soul: such fear
The giants caused us, that the way was lost
By which we could pursue a fit career
In search of Jesus and the saintly host;
And your departure breeds such sorrow here,
That comfortless we all are to our cost;
But months and years you would not stay in sloth,
Nor are you formed to wear our sober cloth;

LXXXII.

"But to bear arms, and wield the lance; indeed,
With these as much is done as with this cowl;
In proof of which the Scripture you may read.
This giant up to heaven may bear his soul
By your compassion: now in peace proceed.
Your state and name I seek not to unroll;
But, if I'm asked, this answer shall be given,
That here an angel was sent down from heaven.

LXXXIII.

"If you want armor or aught else, go in,
Look o'er the wardrobe, and take what you choose,
And cover with it o'er this giant's skin."
Orlando answered, "If there should lie loose
Some armor, ere our journey we begin,
Which might be turned to my companion's use,
The gift would be acceptable to me."
The abbot said to him, "Come in and see."

LXXXIV.

E in certa cameretta entrati sono,
Che d'armadure vecchie era copiosa ;
Dice l'abate, tutte ve le dono.
Morgante va rovistando ogni cosa ;
Ma solo un certo sbergo gli fu buono,
Ch'avea tutta la maglia rugginosa :
Maravigliossi che lo cuopra appunto :
Che mai più gnun forse glien' era aggiunto.

LXXXV.

Questo fu d'un gigante smisurato,
Ch'a la badia fu morto per antico
Dal gran Milon d'Angrante, ch' arrivato
V' era, s'appunto questa istoria dico ;
Ed era ne le mura istoriato,
Come e' fu morto questo gran nimico,
Che fece a la badia già lunga guerra :
E Milon v'è com' e' l'abbatte in terra.

LXXXVI.

Veggendo questa istoria il conte Orlando,
Fra suo cor disse : o Dio, che sai sol tutto,
Come venne Milon quì capitando,
Che ha questo gigante quì distrutto ?
E lesse certe letter lacrimando,
Che non potè tenir piu il viso asciutto,
Com'io dirò ne la seguente istoria.
Di mal vi guardi il Re de l'alta gloria.

LXXXIV.

And in a certain closet, where the wall

Was covered with old armor like a crust,
The abbot said to them, "I give you all."

Morgante rummaged piecemeal from the dust
The whole, which save one cuirass, was too small,

And that too had the mail inlaid with rust.
They wondered how it fitted him exactly,
Which ne'er has suited others so compactly.

LXXXV.

'T was an immeasurable giant's, who
By the great Milo of Agrante fell
Before the abbey many years ago.

The story on the wall was figured well ;
In the last moment of the abbey's foe,

Who long had waged a war implacable :
Precisely as the war occurred they drew him,
And there was Milo as he overthrew him.

LXXXVI.

Seeing this history, Count Orlando said

In his own heart, "Oh God, who in the sky
Know'st all things ! how was Milo hither led ?

Who caused the giant in this place to die ?"
And certain letters, weeping, then he read,

So that he could not keep his visage dry, —
As I will tell in the ensuing story.

From evil keep you the high King of glory.

These societies were denominated Blue-stockings Clubs; the origin of which title being little known, it may be worth while to relate it. One of the most eminent members of those societies, when they first commenced, was Mr. Stillingfleet, whose dress was remarkably grave, and in particular it was observed that he wore blue stockings. Such was the excellence of his conversation, that his absence was felt as so great a loss, that it used to be said, ‘ We can do nothing without the blue stockings;’ and thus by degrees the title was established.” — CROKER’S Boswell, vol. iv. p. 480. — Sir William Forbes, in his Life of Dr. Beattie, says, that “ a for-

Not a rag of his present or past reputation,
 Which they call a disgrace to the age and the nation.

Ink. I'm sorry to hear this! for friendship, you know ——

Our poor friend! — but I thought it would terminate so.

Our friendship is such, I'll read nothing to shock it.
 You don't happen to have the Review in your pocket?

Tra. No; I left a round dozen of authors and others
 (Very sorry, no doubt, since the cause is a brother's)

* [This cant phrase was first used in the Edinburgh Review — probably by Mr. Jeffrey.]

All scrambling and jostling, like so many imps,
And on fire with impatience to get the next glimpse.

Ink. Let us join them.

Tra. What, won't you return to the lecture?

Ink. Why, the place is so crammed, there's not room for a spectre.

Besides, our friend Scamp is to-day so absurd —

Tra. How can you know that till you hear him?

Ink. I heard
Quite enough; and to tell you the truth, my retreat
Was from his vile nonsense, no less than the heat.

Tra. I have had no great loss then?

Ink. Loss! — such a palaver!
I'd inoculate sooner my wife with the slaver
Of a dog when gone rabid, than listen two hours
To the torrent of trash which around him he pours, Pumped up with such effort, disgorged with such labor, [neighbor.

That — come — do not make me speak ill of one's

Tra. I make you!

Ink. Yes, you! I said nothing until
You compelled me, by speaking the truth —

Tra. To speak ill?

Is that your deduction?

Ink. When speaking of Scamp ill,
I certainly follow, not set an example.

The fellow's a fool, an impostor, a zany.

Tra. And the crowd of to-day shows that one fool makes many.

But we two will be wise.

Ink. Pray, then, let us retire.

Tra. I would, but ——

Ink. There must be attraction much higher
Than Scamp, or the Jews' harp he nicknames his lyre,
To call you to this hotbed.

Tra. I own it — tis true —
A fair lady ——

Ink. A spinster?

Tra. Miss Lilac!

Ink. The Blue!

The heiress?

Tra. The angel!

Ink. The devil! why, man!
Pray get out of this hobble as fast as you can.
You wed with Miss Lilac! 't would be your perdition:

She's a poet, a chymist, a mathematician.

Tra. I say she's an angel.

Ink. Say rather an angle.
If you and she marry, you'll certainly wrangle.
I say she's a Blue, man, as blue as the ether.

Tra. And is that any cause for not coming together?

Ink. Humph! I can't say I know any happy alliance
Which has lately sprung up from a wedlock with science.

She's so learned in all things, and fond of concerning
Herself in all matters connected with learning,

That ——

Tra. What?

Ink. I perhaps may as well hold my tongue ;
But there's five hundred people can tell you you're wrong.

Tra. You forget Lady Lilac's as rich as a Jew.

Ink. Is it miss or the cash of mamma you pursue ?

Tra. Why, Jack, I'll be frank with you — something of both.

The girl's a fine girl.

Ink. And you feel nothing loth

To her good lady-mother's reversion ; and yet

Her life is as good as your own, I will bet.

Tra. Let her live, and as long as she likes ; I demand [hand.

Nothing more than the heart of her daughter and

Ink. Why, that heart's in the inkstand — that hand on the pen.

Tra. A propos — Will you write me a song now and then ?

Ink. To what purpose ?

Tra. You know, my dear friend, that in prose
My talent is decent, as far as it goes ;
But in rhyme —

Ink. You're a terrible stick, to be sure.

Tra. I own it ; and yet in these times, there's no lure

For the heart of the fair like a stanza or two ;

And so as I can't, will you furnish a few ?

Ink. In your name ?

Tra. In my name. I will copy them out,
To slip into her hand at the very next rout.

Ink. Are you so far advanced as to hazard this ?

Tra. Why,

Do you think me subdued by a Blue-stocking's eye,
So far as to tremble to tell her in rhyme

What I've told her in prose, at the least, as sublime ?

Ink. As sublime ! If it be so, no need of my Muse.

Tra. But consider, dear Ink, she's one of the "Blues."

Ink. As sublime ! — Mr. Tracy — I've nothing to say.

Stick to prose — As sublime !! — but I wish you good day.

Tra. Nay, stay, my dear fellow — consider — I'm wrong ;

I own it ; but, prithee, compose me the song.

Ink. As sublime !!

Tra. I but used the expression in haste.

Ink. That may be, Mr. Tracy, but shows damned bad taste.

Tra. I own it — know it — acknowledge it — what Can I say to you more ?

Ink. I see what you'd be at :
You disparage my parts with insidious abuse,
Till you think you can turn them best to your own use.

Tra. And is that not a sign I respect them ?

Ink. Why that

To be sure makes a difference.

Tra. I know what is what :
And you, who're a man of the gay world, no less

Than a poet of t' other, may easily guess
That I never could mean, by a word, to offend
A genius like you, and moreover my friend.

Ink. No doubt; you by this time should know what is due

To a man of —— but come — let us shake hands.

Tra. You knew,

And you know, my dear fellow, how heartily I,
Whatever you publish, am ready to buy.

Ink. That's my bookseller's business; I care not for sale;

Indeed the best poems at first rather fail.

There were Renegade's epics, and Botherby's plays,*

And my own grand romance —

Tra. Had its full share of praise.

I myself saw it puffed in the "Old Girl's Review."†

Ink. What Review?

Tra. 'Tis the English "Journal de Trevoux;"‡

A clerical work of our jesuits at home.

Have you never seen it?

Ink. That pleasure's to come.

Tra. Make haste then.

* [Messrs. Southey and Sotheby.]

† ["My Grandmother's Review, the British." Which has since been gathered to its grandmothers.]

‡ [The "Journal de Trevoux" (in fifty-six volumes) is one of the most curious collections of literary gossip in the world, — and the Poet paid the British Review an extravagant compliment, when he made this comparison.]

Ink. Why so?

Tra. I have heard people say
That it threatened to give up the ghost t' other day.

Ink. Well, that is a sign of some spirit.

Tra. No doubt.
Shall you be at the Countess of Fiddlecome's rout?

Ink. I've a card, and shall go: but at present, as soon

As friend Scamp shall be pleased to step down from the moon

(Where he seems to be soaring in search of his wits),
And an interval grants from his lecturing fits,
I'm engaged to the Lady Bluebottle's collation,
To partake of a luncheon and learned conversation:
'T is a sort of re-union for Scamp, on the days
Of his lecture, to treat him with cold tongue and praise.

And I own, for my own part, that 't is not unpleasant.
Will you go? There's Miss Lilac will also be present.

Tra. That "metal's attractive."

Ink. No doubt — to the pocket.

Tra. You should rather encourage my passion than shock it.

But let us proceed; for I think, by the hum ——

Ink. Very true; let us go, then, before they can come,

Or else we'll be kept here an hour at their levy,
On the rack of cross-questions, by all the blue bevy.
Hark! Zounds, they'll be on us; I know by the drone
Of old Botherby's spouting ex-cathedrâ tone.

Ay! there he is at it. Poor Scamp! better join
Your friends, or he'll pay you back in your own coin.

Tra. All fair; 't is but lecture for lecture.

Ink.

That's clear.

But for God's sake let's go, or the Bore will be here.
Come, come; nay, I'm off. [Exit INKEL.

Tra.

You are right, and I'll follow;

'T is high time for a "Sic me servavit Apollo."*

And yet we shall have the whole crew on our kibes,
Blues, dandies, and dowagers, and second-hand
scribes,

All flocking to moisten their exquisite throttles
With a glass of Madeira at Lady Bluebottle's.

[Exit TRACY.

* ["Sotheby is a good man — rhymes well (if not wisely); but is a bore. He seizes you by the button. One night of a rout at Mrs. Hope's, he had fastened upon me — (something about Agamemnon, or Orestes, or some of his plays) notwithstanding my symptoms of manifest distress — (for I was in love, and just nicked a minute when neither mothers, nor husbands, nor rivals, nor gossips were near my then idol, who was beautiful as the statues of the gallery where we stood at the time). Sotheby, I say, had seized upon me by the button and the heart-strings, and spared neither. William Spencer, who likes fun, and don't dislike mischief, saw my case, and coming up to us both, took me by the hand, and pathetically bade me farewell; "for," said he, "I see it is all over with you." Sotheby then went away: 'sic me servavit Apollo.'" — Byron's Diary, 1821.]

ECLOGUE SECOND.

*An Apartment in the House of LADY BLUEBOTTLE.
— A Table prepared.*

SIR RICHARD BLUEBOTTLE solus.

Was there ever a man who was married so sorry?
Like a fool, I must needs do the thing in a hurry.
My life is reversed, and my quiet destroyed;
My days, which once passed in so gentle a void,
Must now, every hour of the twelve, be employed:
The twelve, do I say? — of the whole twenty-four,
Is there one which I dare call my own any more?
What with driving and visiting, dancing and dining,
What with learning, and teaching, and scribbling,
and shining,
In science and art, I'll be cursed if I know
Myself from my wife; for although we are two,
Yet she somehow contrives that all things shall be done
In a style which proclaims us eternally one.
But the thing of all things which distresses me more Than the bills of the week (though they trouble me sore)
Is the numerous, humorous, backbiting crew
Of scribblers, wits, lecturers, white, black, and blue,
Who are brought to my house as an inn, to my cost
— For the bill here, it seems, is defrayed by the host—

No pleasure ! no leisure ! no thought for my pains,
 But to hear a vile jargon which addles my brains ;
 A smatter and chatter, gleaned out of reviews,
 By the rag, tag, and bobtail, of those they call
 " BLUES ; "

A rabble who know not — But soft, here they come !

Would to God I were deaf ! as I'm not, I'll be dumb.

Enter LADY BLUEBOTTLE, MISS LILAC, LADY
 BLUEMOUNT, MR. BOTHERBY, INKEL, TRACY,
 MISS MAZARINE, and others, with SCAMP the Lecturer, etc. etc.

Lady Blueb. Ah ! Sir Richard, good morning ;
 I've brought you some friends.

Sir Rich. (bows, and afterwards aside.) If friends,
 they're the first.

Lady Blueb. But the luncheon attends.

I pray ye be seated, "sans cérémonie."

Mr. Scamp, you're fatigued ; take your chair there, next me. [They all sit.

Sir Rich. (aside.) If he does, his fatigue is to come.

Lady Blueb. Mr. Tracy —

Lady Bluemount — Miss Lilac — be pleased, pray, to place ye ;

And you, Mr. Botherby —

Both. Oh, my dear Lady,

I obey.

Lady Blueb. Mr. Inkel, I ought to upbraid ye :
 You were not at the lecture.

Ink. Excuse me, I was ;
But the heat forced me out in the best part — alas !
And when ——

Lady Blueb. To be sure it was broiling ; but then
You have lost such a lecture !

Both. The best of the ten.

Tra. How can you know that ? there are two more.

Both. Because
I defy him to beat this day's wondrous applause.
The very walls shook.

Ink. Oh, if that be the test,
I allow our friend Scamp has this day done his best.
Miss Lilac, permit me to help you ; — a wing ?

Miss Lil. No more, sir, I thank you. Who lectures next spring ?

Both. Dick Dunder.

Ink. That is, if he lives.

Miss Lil. And why not ?

Ink. No reason whatever, save that he's a sot.
Lady Bluemount ! a glass of Madeira ?

Lady Bluem. With pleasure.

Ink. How does your friend Wordswords, that Windermere treasure ?

Does he stick to his lakes, like the leeches he sings,
And their gatherers, as Homer sung warriors and kings ?

Lady Blueb. He has just got a place.

Ink. As a footman ?

Lady Bluem. For shame !

Nor profane with your sneers so poetic a name.

Ink. Nay, I meant him no evil, but pitied his master;

For the poet of pedlers 'twere, sure, no disaster
To wear a new livery; the more, as 'tis not
The first time he has turned both his creed and his coat.

Lady Bluem. For shame! I repeat. If Sir George could but hear ——

Lady Blueb. Never mind our friend Inkel; we all know, my dear,

'Tis his way.

Sir Rich. But this place ——

Ink. Is perhaps like friend Scamp's,
A lecturer's.

Lady Blueb. Excuse me — 'tis one in "the Stamps:"

He is made a collector.*

Tra. Collector!

Sir Rich. How?

Miss Lil. What?

Ink. I shall think of him oft when I buy a new hat:
There his works will appear ——

Lady Bluem. Sir, they reach to the Ganges.

Ink. I sha'n't go so far — I can have them at Grange's.†

Lady Blueb. Oh fie!

Miss Lil. And for shame!

* [Wordsworth was collector of stamps for Cumberland and Westmoreland.]

† Grange is or was a famous pastry-cook and fruiterer in Piccadilly.

Lady Bluem. You're too bad.

Both. Very good!

Lady Bluem. How good?

Lady Blueb. He means nought — 'tis his phrase.

Lady Bluem. He grows rude.

Lady Blueb. He means nothing; nay, ask him.

Lady Bluem. Pray, sir! did you mean

What you say?

Ink. Never mind if he did; 'twill be seen
That whatever he means won't alloy what he says.

Both. Sir!

Ink. Pray be content with your portion of praise;
'Twas in your defence.

Both. If you please, with submission,
I can make out my own.

Ink. It would be your perdition.
While you live, my dear Botherby, never defend Yourself or your works; but leave both to a friend.
A propos — Is your play then accepted at last?

Both. At last?

Ink. Why I thought — that's to say — there had passed
A few green-room whispers, which hinted — you
know

That the taste of the actors at best is so so.*

* ["When I belonged to the Drury Lane Committee, the number of plays upon the shelves were about five hundred. Mr. Sotheby obligingly offered us ALL his tragedies, and I pledged myself, and — notwithstanding many squabbles with my committee brethren — did get Ivan accepted, read, and the Both. Sir, the green-room's in rapture, and so's the committee.

Ink. Ay — yours are the plays for exciting our "pity
And fear," as the Greek says: for "purging the mind,"

I doubt if you'll leave us an equal behind.

Both. I have written the prologue, and meant to have prayed
For a spice of your wit in an epilogue's aid.

Ink. Well, time enough yet, when the play's to be played.
Is it cast yet?

Both. The actors are fighting for parts,
As is usual in that most litigious of arts.

Lady Blueb. We'll all make a party, and go the first night.

Tra. And you promised the epilogue, Inkel.

Ink. Not quite.
However, to save my friend Botherby trouble,
I'll do what I can, though my pains must be double.

Tra. Why so?

Ink. To do justice to what goes before.

Both. Sir, I'm happy to say, I have no fears on that score.

Your parts, Mr. Inkel, are —— parts distributed. But lo! in the very heart of the matter, upon some tepid-ness on the part of Kean, or warmth on that of the author, Sotheby withdrew his play." — Byron's Diary, 1821.]

Ink. Never mind mine ;
Stick to those of your play, which is quite your own line.

Lady Bluem. You're a fugitive writer, I think,
sir, of rhymes ?

Ink. Yes, ma'am ; and a fugitive reader sometimes.
On Wordswords, for instance, I seldom alight,
Or on Mouthey, his friend, without taking to flight.

Lady Bluem. Sir, your taste is too common ; but time and posterity
Will right these great men, and this age's severity
Become its reproach.

Ink. I've no sort of objection,
So I'm not of the party to take the infection.

Lady Blueb. Perhaps you have doubts that they ever will take ?

Ink. Not at all ; on the contrary, those of the lake

Have taken already, and still will continue
To take — what they can, from a groat to a guinea,
Of pension or place ; — but the subject's a bore.

Lady Bluem. Well, sir, the time's coming.

Ink. Scamp ! don't you feel sore ?
What say you to this ?

Scamp. They have merit, I own ;
Though their system's absurdity keeps it unknown.

Ink. Then why not unearth it in one of your lectures ?

Scamp. It is only time past which comes under my strictures.

Lady Blueb. A truce with remark, and let nothing control

This "feast of our reason, and flow of the soul."

Oh! my dear Mr. Botherby! sympathise! — I

Now feel such a rapture, I'm ready to fly,

I feel so elastic — "so buoyant — so buoyant!"*

Ink. Tracy! open the window.

Tra. I wish her much joy on't.

Both. For God's sake, my Lady Bluebottle, check not

This gentle emotion, so seldom our lot

Upon earth. Give it way; 'tis an impulse which lifts

Our spirits from earth; the sublimest of gifts;

For which poor Prometheus was chained to his mountain.

'Tis the source of all sentiment — feeling's true
fountain:

'Tis the Vision of Heaven upon Earth: 'tis the gas
Of the soul: 'tis the seizing of shades as they pass,
And making them substance: 'tis something divine: —

Ink. Shall I help you, my friend, to a little more wine?

Both. I thank you; not any more, sir, till I dine.

Ink. A propos — Do you dine with Sir Hum-phry † to-day?

* Fact from life, with the words.

† [Sir Humphry Davy, President of the Royal Society.]

Tra. I should think with Duke Humphry was more in your way.

Ink. It might be of yore; but we authors now look To the knight, as a landlord, much more than the Duke.

The truth is, each writer now quite at his ease is,
And (except with his publisher) dines where he pleases.

But 't is now nearly five, and I must to the Park.

Tra. And I'll take a turn with you there till 't is dark.

And you, Scamp —

Scamp. Excuse me; I must to my notes,
For my lectures next week.

Ink. He must mind whom he quotes
Out of "Elegant Extracts."

Lady Blueb. Well, now we break up,
But remember Miss Diddle* invites us to sup.

Ink. Then at two hours past midnight we all meet again,
For the sciences, sandwiches, hock, and champagne!

Tra. And the sweet lobster salad!

Both. I honor that meal;
For 't is then that our feelings most genuinely — feel.

Ink. True; feeling is truest then, far beyond question:
I wish to the gods 't was the same with digestion!

* [Miss Lydia White, an accomplished, clever, and truly amiable, but very ecoentric lady.]

Lady Blueb. Pshaw! — never mind that; for one moment of feeling
Is worth — God knows what.
Ink. 'Tis at least worth concealing
For itself, or what follows — But here comes your carriage.

Sir Rich. (aside). I wish all these people were d——d with my marriage! [Exeunt.

THE VISION OF JUDGMENT,

BY
QUEVEDO REDIVIVUS.

SUGGESTED BY THE COMPOSITION SO ENTITLED BY THE AUTHOR OF "WAT TYLER."

"A Daniel come to judgment! yea, a Daniel!
I thank thee, Jew, for teaching me that word."

(187)

PREFACE.

It hath been wisely said, that "One fool makes many;" and it hath been poetically observed,

"That fools rush in where angels fear to tread." — Pope.

If Mr. Southey had not rushed in where he had no business, and where he never was before, and never will be again, the following poem would not have been written. It is not impossible that it may be as good as his own, seeing that it cannot, by any species of stupidity, natural or acquired, be worse. The gross flattery, the dull impudence, the renegade intolerance and impious cant, of the poem by the author of "Wat Tyler," are something so stupendous as to form the sublime of himself—containing the quintessence of his own attributes.

So much for his poem—a word on his preface. In this preface it has pleased the magnanimous Laureate to draw the picture of a supposed "Satanic School," the which he doth recommend to the notice of the legislature; thereby adding to his other laurels the ambition of those of an informer.

If there exists anywhere, excepting in his imagination, such a School, is he not sufficiently armed against it by his own intense vanity? The truth is, that there are certain writers whom Mr. S. imagines, like Scrub, to have "talked of him;" for they laughed consumedly."

I think I know enough of most of the writers to whom he is supposed to allude, to assert, that they, in their individual capacities, have done more good, in the charities of life, to their fellow-creatures in any one year, than Mr. Southey has done harm to himself by his absurdities in his whole life; and this is saying a great deal. But I have a few questions to ask.

1st. Is Mr. Southey the author of "Wat Tyler?"

2d. Was he not refused a remedy at law by the highest judge of his beloved England, because it was a blasphemous and seditious publication? *

* [In 1821, when Mr. Southey applied to the Court of Chancery for an injunction to restrain the publication of "Wat Tyler," Lord Chancellor Eldon pronounced the following judgment:—"I have looked into all the affidavits, and have read the book itself. The bill goes the length of stating, that the work was composed by Mr. Southey in the year 1794; that it is his own production, and that it has been published by the defendants without his sanction or authority; and therefore seeking an account of the profits which have arisen from, and an injunction to restrain, the publication. I have examined the cases that I have been able to meet with containing precedents for injunctions of this nature, and I find that they all proceed upon the ground of a title to the property in the plaintiff. On this head a distinction has been taken, to which a considerable weight of authority attaches, supported, as it is, by the opinion

3d. Was he not entitled by William Smith, in full parliament, "a rancorous renegado?" *

4th. Is he not poet laureate, with his own lines on Martin the regicide staring him in the face? † of Lord Chief Justice Eyre; who has expressly laid it down, that a person cannot recover in damages for a work which is, in its nature, calculated to do injury to the public. Upon the same principle this court refused an injunction in the case of Walcot" (Peter Pindar) "v. Walker, inasmuch as he could not have recovered damages in an action. After the fullest consideration, I remain of the same opinion as that which I entertained in deciding the case referred to. Taking all the circumstances into my consideration, it appears to me, that I cannot grant this injunction, until after Mr. Southey shall have established his right to the property by action." — Injunction refused.]

* [Mr. William Smith, M. P. for Norwich, made a virulent attack on Mr. Southey in the House of Commons on the 14th of March, 1817, and the Laureate replied by a letter in the Courier.]

† [Among the effusions of Mr. Southey's juvenile muse, we find this "Inscription for the Apartment in Chepstow Castle, where Henry Martin, the Regicide, was imprisoned thirty years:—

"For thirty years secluded from mankind
Here Martin lingered. Often have these walls
Echoed his footsteps, as with even tread
He paced around his prison. Not to him
Did Nature's fair varieties exist;
He never saw the sun's delightful beams;
Save when through yon high bars he poured a sad
And broken splendor. Dost thou ask his crime?
*He had rebelled against the King, and sat
In judgment on him; for his ardent mind
Shaped goodliest plans of happiness on earth,
And peace and liberty. Wild dreams! but such
As Plato loved; such as, with holy zeal,
Our Milton worshipped. Blessed hopes! awhile
From man withheld, even to the latter days
When Christ shall come, and all things be fulfilled.*"']

And 5th. Putting the four preceding items together, with what conscience dare he call the attention of the laws to the publications of others, be they what they may?

I say nothing of the cowardice of such a proceeding; its meanness speaks for itself; but I wish to touch upon the motive, which is neither more nor less than that Mr. S. has been laughed at a little in some recent publications, as he was of yore in the "Anti-jacobin" by his present patrons.* Hence all this "skimble scramble stuff" about "Satanic," and so forth. However, it is worthy of him — "qualis ab incepto."

* [The following imitation of the Inscription on the Regicide's Apartment, written by Mr. Canning, appeared in the "Anti-jacobin." —

"Inscription for the Door of the Cell in Newgate, where Mrs. Brownrigg, the 'Prentice-cide, was confined, previous to her Execution.

"For one long term, ere ere her trial came,
Here Brownrigg lingered. Often have these cells
Echoed her blasphemies, as with shrill voice
She screamed for fresh geneva. Not to her
Did the blithe fields of Tothill, or thy street,
St. Giles, its fair varieties expand;
Till at the last in slow-drawn cart she went
To execution. Dost thou ask her crime?
*She whipped two female 'prentices to death,
And hid them in the coal-hole.* For her mind
Shaped strictest plans of discipline. Sage schemes!
Such as Lyeurgus taught, when at the shrine
Of the Orthyan goddess he bade flog
The little Spartans; such as erst chastised
Our Milton, when at college. For this act
Did Brownrigg swing. Harsh laws! But time shall come
When France shall reign, and laws be all repealed."]

If there is any thing obnoxious to the political opinions of a portion of the public in the following poem, they may thank Mr. Southey. He might have written hexameters, as he has written every thing else, for aught that the writer cared—had they been upon another subject. But to attempt to canonize a monarch, who, whatever were his household virtues, was neither a successful nor a patriot king,—inasmuch as several years of his reign passed in war with America and Ireland, to say nothing of the aggression upon France,—like all other exaggeration, necessarily begets opposition. In whatever manner he may be spoken of in this new “Vision,” his public career will not be more favorably transmitted by history. Of his private virtues (although a little expensive to the nation) there can be no doubt.

With regard to the supernatural personages treated of, I can only say that I know as much about them, and (as an honest man) have a better right to talk of them than Robert Southey. I have also treated them more tolerantly. The way in which that poor insane creature, the Laureate, deals about his judgments in the next world, is like his own judgment in this. If it was not completely ludicrous, it would be something worse. I don't think that there is much more to say at present.

QUEVEDO REDIVIVUS.

P. S. — It is possible that some readers may object, in these objectionable times, to the freedom with which saints, angels, and spiritual persons discourse in this "Vision." But, for precedents upon such points, I must refer him to Fielding's "Journey from this World to the next," and to the Visions of myself, the said Quevedo, in Spanish or translated. The reader is also requested to observe, that no doctrinal tenets are insisted upon or discussed; that the person of the Deity is carefully withheld from sight, which is more than can be said for the Laureate, who hath thought proper to make him talk, not "like a school divine," but like the unscholarlike Mr. Southey. The whole action passes on the outside of heaven; and Chaucer's Wife of Bath, Pulci's Morgante Maggiore, Swift's Tale of a Tub, and the others work above referred to, are cases in point of the freedom with which saints, etc. may be permitted to converse in works not intended to be serious.

Q. R.

. Mr. Southey being, as he says, a good Christian and vindictive, threatens, I understand, a reply to this our answer. It is to be hoped that his visionary faculties will in the mean time have acquired a little more judgment, properly so called: otherwise he will get himself into new dilemmas. These apostate jacobins furnish rich rejoinders. Let him take a specimen. Mr. Southey laudeth grievously

"one Mr. Landor," who cultivates much private renown in the shape of Latin verses; and not long ago, the poet laureate dedicated to him, it appeareth, one of his fugitive lyrics, upon the strength of a poem called Gebir. Who could suppose, that in this same Gebir the aforesaid Savage Landor (for such is his grim cognomen) putteth into the infernal regions no less a person than the hero of his friend Mr. Southey's heaven,—yea, even George the Third! See also how personal Savage becometh, when he hath a mind. The following is his portrait of our late gracious sovereign:—

(Prince Gebir having descended into the infernal regions, the shades of his royal ancestors are, at his request, called up to his view; and he exclaims to his ghastly guide)—

"Aroar, what wretch that nearest us? what wretch
Is that with eyebrows white and slanting brow?
Listen! him yonder, who, bound down supine,
Shrinks yelling from that sword there, engine-hung.
He too amongst my ancestors! I hate
The despot, but the dastard I despise.
Was he our countryman?"

"Alas, O king!

Iberia bore him, but the breed accurst
Inclement winds blew blighting from north-east."

"He was a warrior then, nor feared the gods?"

Gebir, he feared the demons, not the gods,
Though them indeed his dally face adored;
And was no warrior, yet the thousand lives
Squandered, as stones to exercise a sling,
And the tame cruelty and cold caprice—
Oh madness of mankind! addressed, adored!"—Gebir, p. 23.

I omit noticing some edifying Ithyphallics of Sa-

vagius, wishing to keep the proper veil over them, if his grave but somewhat indiscreet worshipper will suffer it; but certainly these teachers of "great moral lessons" are apt to be found in strange company.

APPENDIX TO THE PREFACE.

[SOUTHEY, in 1821, published a poem in English hexameters, entitled "A Vision of Judgment;" in the preface to which, after some observations on the peculiar style of its versification, occurs the following remarks:—

"I am well aware that the public are peculiarly intolerant of such innovations; not less so than the populace are of any foreign fashion, whether of foppery or convenience. Would that this literary intolerance were under the influence of a saner judgment, and regarded the morals more than the manner of a composition; the spirit rather than the form! Would that it were directed against those monstrous combinations of horrors and mockery, lewdness and impiety, with which English poetry has, in our days, first been polluted! For more than half a century English literature had been distinguished by its moral purity, the effect, and, in its turn, the cause of an improvement in national manners. A father might, without apprehension of evil, have put into the hands of his children any book which issued from the press, if it did not bear, either in its title-page or frontispiece, manifest signs that it was intended as furniture for the brothel. There was no danger in any work which bore the name of a respectable publisher, or was to be procured at any respectable bookseller's. This was particularly the case with regard to our poetry. It is now no longer so: and woe to those by whom the offence cometh! The greater the talents of the offender, the greater is his guilt, and the more enduring will be his shame. Whether it be that the laws are in themselves unable to abate an evil of this magnitude, or whether it be that they are remissly administered, and with such injustice that the celebrity of an offender serves as a privilege whereby he obtains impunity, individuals are bound to consider that such pernicious works would neither be published nor written, if they were discouraged as they might, and ought to be, by public feeling : every person, therefore, who purchases such books, or admits them into his house, promotes the mischief, and thereby, as far as in him lies, becomes an aider and abettor of the crime.

"The publication of a lascivious book is one of the worst offences which can be committed against the well-being of society. It is a sin, to the consequences of which no limits can be assigned, and those consequences no after-repentance in the writer can counteract. Whatever remorse of conscience he may feel when his hour comes (and come it must!) will be of no avail. The poignancy of a death-bed repentance cannot cancel one copy of the thousands which are sent abroad ; and as long as it continues to be read, so long is he the pander of posterity, and so long is he heaping up guilt upon his soul in perpetual accumulation.

"These remarks are not more severe than the offence deserves, even when applied to those immoral writers who have not been conscious of any evil intention in their writings, who would acknowledge a little levity, a little warmth of coloring, and so forth, in that sort of language with which men gloss over their favorite vices, and deceive themselves. What then should be said of those for whom the thoughtlessness and inebriety of wanton youth can no longer be pleaded, but who have written in sober manhood and with deliberate purpose ? — Men of diseased hearts and depraved imaginations, who, forming a system of opinions to suit their own unhappy course of conduct, have rebelled against the holiest ordinances of human society, and hating that revealed religion which, with all their efforts and bravadoes, they are unable entirely to disbelieve, labor to make others as miserable as themselves, by infecting them with a moral virus that eats into the soul ! The school which they have set up may properly be called the Satanic school ; for though their productions breathe the spirit of Belial in their lascivious parts, and the spirit of Moloch in those loathsome images of atrocities and horrors which they delight to represent, they are more especially characterized by a Satanic spirit of pride and audacious impety, which still betrays the wretched feeling of hopelessness wherewith it is allied.

"This evil is political as well as moral, for indeed moral and political evils are inseparably connected. Truly has it been affirmed by one of our ablest and clearest reasoners, that 'the destruction of governments may be proved and deduced from the general corruption of the subjects' manners, as a direct and natural cause thereof, by a demonstration as certain as any in the mathematics.' There is no maxim more frequently enforced by Machiavelli, than that where the manners of a people are generally corrupted, there the government cannot long subsist,—a truth which all history exemplifies; and there is no means whereby that corruption can be so surely and rapidly diffused, as by poisoning the waters of literature.

“Let rulers of the state look to this, in time! But, to use the words of Southey, if ‘our physicians think the best way of curing a disease is to pamper it,—the Lord in mercy prepare the kingdom to suffer, what He by miracle only can prevent!’

“No apology is offered for these remarks. The subject led to them; and the occasion of introducing them was willingly taken, because it is the duty of every one, whose opinion may have any influence, to expose the drift and aim of those writers who are laboring to subvert the foundations of human virtue and of human happiness.”

Byron rejoined as follows:—

“Mr. Southey, in his pious preface to a poem whose blasphemy is as harmless as the sedition of Wat Tyler, because it is equally absurd with that sincere production, calls upon the ‘legislature to look to it,’ as the toleration of such writings led to the French Revolution: not such writings as Wat Tyler, but as those of the ‘Satanic School.’ This is not true, and Mr. Southey knows it to be not true. Every French writer of any freedom was persecuted; Voltaire and Rousseau were exiles, Marmontel and Diderot were sent to the Bastille, and a perpetual war was waged with the whole class by the existing despotism. In the next place, the French Revolution was not occasioned by any writings whatsoever, but must have occurred had no such writers ever existed. It is the fashion to attribute every thing to the French Revolution, and the French Revolution to every thing but its real cause. That cause is obvious—the government exacted too much, and the people could neither give nor bear more. Without this, the Encyclopedists might have written their fingers off without the occurrence of a single alteration. And the English revolution—(the first, I mean)—what was it occasioned by? The Puritans were surely as pious and moral as Wesley or his biographer? Acts—acts on the part of government, and not writings against them, have caused the past convulsions, and are tending to the future.

“I look upon such as inevitable, though no revolutionist: I wish to see the English constitution restored, and not destroyed. Born an aristocrat, and naturally one by temper, with the greater part of my present property in the funds, what have I to gain by a revolution? Perhaps I have more to lose in every way than Mr. Southey, with all his places and presents for panegyrics and abuse into the bargain. But that a revolution is inevitable, I repeat. The government may exult over the repression of petty tumults; these are but the receding waves repulsed and broken for a moment on the shore, while the great tide is still rolling on and gaining ground with every breaker. Mr. Southey accuses us of attacking the religion of the country; and is he abetting it by writing lives of Wesley? One mode of worship is merely destroyed by another. There never was, nor ever will be, a country without a religion. We shall be told of France again: but it was only Paris and a frantic party, which for a moment upheld their dogmatic nonsense of theophilanthropy. The church of England, if overthrown, will be swept away by the sectarians and not by the sceptics. People are too wise, too well informed, too certain of their own immense importance in the realms of space, ever to submit to the impiety of doubt. There may be a few such diffident speculators, like water in the pale sunbeam of human reason, but they are very few; and their opinions, without enthusiasm or appeal to the passions, can never gain proselytes—unless, indeed, they are persecuted—that, to be sure, will increase any thing.

“Mr. Southey, with a cowardly ferocity, exults over the anticipated ‘death-bed repentance’ of the objects of his dislike; and indulges himself in a pleasant ‘Vision of Judgment,’ in prose as well as verse, full of impious impudence. What Mr. Southey’s sensations or ours may be in the awful moment of leaving this state of existence, neither he nor we can pretend to decide. In common, I presume, with most men of any reflection, I have not waited for a ‘death-bed to repent of many of my actions, notwithstanding the ‘diabolical pride’ which this pitiful renegade in his rancor would impute to those who scorn him. Whether upon the whole the good or evil of my deeds may preponderate is not for me to ascertain; but as my means and opportunities have been greater, I shall limit my present defence to an assertion, (easily proved, if necessary,) that I, ‘in my degree,’ have done more real good in any one given year, since I was twenty, than Mr. Southey in the whole course of his shifting and turncoat existence. There are several actions to which I can look back with an honest pride, not to be damped by the calmness of a hireling. There are others to which I recur with sorrow and repentance; but the only act of my life of which Mr. Southey can have any real knowledge, as it was one which brought me in contact with a near connection of his own,* did no dishonor to that connection nor to me.

“I am not ignorant of Mr. Southey’s calumnies on a different occasion, knowing them to be such, which he scattered abroad on his return from Switzerland against me and others: they have done him no good in this world; and if his creed be the right one, they will do him less in the next. What his ‘death-bed’ may be, it is not my province to predicate : let him settle with his Maker as I must do with mine. There is something at once ludicrous and blasphemous in this arrogant scribbler of all work sitting down to deal damnation and destruction upon his fellow-creatures, with Wat Tyler, the Apotheosis of George the Third, and the Elegy on Martin the regicide, all shuffled together in his writing-desk. One of his consolations appears to be a Latin note from a work of a Mr. Landor, the author of 'Gebir,' whose friendship for Robert Southey will, it seems, 'be an honor to him when the ephemeral disputes and ephemeral reputations of the day are forgotten.' * I for one neither envy him 'the friendship,' nor the glory in reversion which is to accrue from it, like Mr. Thelussen's fortune in the third and fourth generation. This friendship will probably be as memorable as his own epics, which (as I quoted to him ten or twelve years ago in 'English Bards') Porson said 'would be remembered when Homer and Virgil are forgotten, — and not till then.' For the present, I leave him."

Southey replied to this on the 5th of January, 1822, in a letter addressed to the Editor of the London Courier, of which we quote all that is of importance: —

"I come at once to his Lordship's charge against me, blowing away the abuse with which it is frothed, and evaporating a strong acid in which it is suspended. The residuum then appears to be, that 'Mr. Southey, on his return from Switzerland (in 1817), scattered abroad calumnies, knowing them to be such, against Lord Byron and others.' To this I reply with a direct and positive denial.

"If I had been told in that country that Lord Byron had turned Turk, or Monk of La Trappe, — that he had furnished a harem, or endowed an hospital, I might have thought the account, whichever it had been, possible, and repeated it accordingly; passing it, as it had been taken, in the small change of conversation, for no more than it was worth. In this manner I might have spoken of him, as of Baron Geramb,† the

* Southey after quoting in a note to his preface a Latin passage from Mr. Landor, spoke thus of its author: — "I will only say in this place that to have obtained his approbation as a poet, and possessed his friendship as a man, will be remembered among the honors of my life, when the petty enmities of this generation will be forgotten, and its ephemeral reputations shall have passed away."

† [Baron Geramb, — a German Jew, who, for some time, excited much public attention in London, by the extravagance of his dress. Being very troublesome and menacing in demanding remuneration from Government, for a proposal he had made of engaging a body of Croat troops in the service of England, he was, in 1812, sent out of the country under the alien act.]

Green Man,* the Indian Jugglers, or any other figurants of the time being. There was no reason for any particular delicacy on my part in speaking of his Lordship : and, indeed, I should have thought any thing which might be reported of him, would have injured his character as little as the story which so greatly annoyed Lord Keeper Guilford, that he had ridden a rhinoceros. He may ride a rhinoceros, and though everybody would stare, no one would wonder. But making no inquiry concerning him when I was abroad, because I felt no curiosity, I heard nothing, and had nothing to repeat. When I spoke of wonders to my friends and acquaintance on my return, it was of the flying tree at Alpnacht, and the Eleven Thousand virgins at Cologne — not of Lord Byron. I sought for no staler subject than St. Ursula.

"Once, and only once, in connection with Switzerland, I have alluded to his Lordship ; and as the passage was curtailed in the press, I take this opportunity of restoring it. In the 'Quarterly Review,' speaking incidentally of the Jungfrau, I said 'it was the scene where Lord Byron's Manfred met the Devil and bullied him — though the Devil must have won his cause before any tribunal in this world, or the next, if he had not pleaded more feebly for himself than his advocate, in a cause of canonization, ever pleaded for him.'

"With regard to the 'others,' whom his Lordship accuses me of calumniating, I suppose he alludes to a party of his friends, whose names I found written in the album at Mont-Anvert, with an avowal of Atheism annexed in Greek, and an indignant comment, in the same language, underneath it.† Those names, with that avowal and the comment, I transcribed in my note-book, and spoke of the circumstance on my return. If I had published it, the gentleman in question would not have thought himself slandered, by having that recorded of him which he has so often recorded of himself.

"The many opprobrious appellations which Lord Byron has bestowed upon me, I leave as I find them, with the praises which he has bestowed upon himself.

'How easily is a noble spirit discerned
From harsh and sulphurous matter that flies out
In contumelies, makes a noise, and stinks!' — B. JONSON.

But I am accustomed to such things ; and, so far from irritating me are the enemies who use such weapons, that, when I hear of their attacks,

† [Shelley signed his name, with the addition of ἀθέος, in this album.]

It is some satisfaction to think they have thus employed the malignity which must have been employed somewhere, and could not have been directed against any person whom it could possibly molest or injure less. The viper, however venomous in purpose, is harmless in effect, while it is biting at the file. It is seldom, indeed, that I waste a word, or a thought, upon those who are perpetually assailing me. But abhorring, as I do, the personalities which disgrace our current literature, and averse from controversy as I am, both by principle and inclination, I make no profession of non-resistance. When the offence and the offender are such as to call for the whip and the branding-iron, it has been both seen and felt that I can inflict them.

"Lord Byron's present exacerbation is evidently produced by an inflection of this kind — not by hearsay reports of my conversation, four years ago, transmitted him from England. The cause may be found in certain remarks upon the Satanic school of poetry, contained in my preface to the 'Vision of Judgment.' Well would it be for Lord Byron if he could look back upon any of his writings, with as much satisfaction as I shall always do upon what is there said of that flagitious school. Many persons, and parents especially, have expressed their gratitude to me for having applied the branding-iron where it was so richly deserved. The Edinburgh Reviewer, indeed, with that honorable feeling by which his criticisms are so peculiarly distinguished, suppressing the remarks themselves, has imputed them wholly to envy on my part. I give him, in this instance, full credit for sincerity: I believe he was equally incapable of comprehending a worthier motive, or of inventing a worse; and as I have never condescended to expose in any instance, his pitiful malevolence, I thank him for having, in this, stripped it bare himself, and exhibited it in its bald, naked, and undisguised deformity.

"Lord Byron, like his encomiast, has not ventured to bring the matter of those animadversions into view. He conceals the fact, that they are directed against the authors of blasphemous and lascivious books; against men who, not content with indulging their own vices, labor to make others the slaves of sensuality, like themselves; against public panders, who, mingling impiety with lewdness, seek at once to destroy the cement of social order, and to carry profanation and pollution into private families, and into the hearts of individuals.

"His Lordship has thought it not unbecoming in him to call me a scribbler of all work. Let the word scribbler pass; it is an appellation which will not stick, like that of the Satanic school. But, if a scribbler, how am I one of all work? I will tell Lord Byron what I have not scribbled — what kind of work I have not done. I have never published libels upon my friends and acquaintance, expressed my sorrow for those libels, and called them in during a mood of better mind — and then released them, when the evil spirit, which for a time had been cast out, had returned and taken possession, with seven others, more wicked than himself. I have never abused the power, of which every author is in some degree possessed, to wound the character of a man, or the heart of a woman. I have never sent into the world a book to which I did not dare to affix my name; or which I feared to claim in a court of justice, if it were pirated by a knavish bookseller. I have never manufactured furniture for the brothel. None of these things have I done; none of the foul work by which literature is perverted to the injury of mankind. My hands are clean; there is no ‘damned spot’ upon them — no taint, which ‘all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten.’

“Of the work which I have done, it becomes me not here to speak save only as relates to the Satanic School, and its Coryphæus, the author of ‘Don Juan.’ I have held up that school to public detestation, as enemies to the religion, the institutions, and the domestic morals of the country. I have given them a designation to which their founder and leader answers. I have sent a stone from my sling which has smitten their Goliath in the forehead. I have fastened his name upon the gibbet, for reproach and ignominy, as long as it shall endure. — Take it down who can!

“One word of advice to Lord Byron before I conclude. — When he attacks me again, let it be in rhyme. For one who has so little command of himself, it will be a great advantage that his temper should be obliged to keep tune. And while he may still indulge in the same rankness and virulence of insult, the metre will, in some degree, seem to lessen its vulgarity.”

Byron, without waiting for the closing hint of the foregoing letter, had already “attacked” Southey “in rhyme.” On October 1, 1821, he says to Moore, —

“I have written about sixty stanzas of a poem, in octave stanzas (in the Pulci style, which the fools in England think was invented by Whistecraft — it is as old as the hills, in Italy,) called ‘The Vision of Judgment,’ by Quevedo Redivivus. In this it is my intention to put the said George’s Apotheosis in a Whig point of view, not forgetting the Poet Laureate, for his preface and his other demerits.”

Byron had proceeded some length in the performance thus announced, before Southey’s letter to the “Courier” fell into his hands. On seeing it, his Lordship’s feelings were so excited, that he could not wait for revenge in inkshed, but on the instant despatched a cartel of mortal defiance to the Poet Laureate, through the medium of Mr. Douglass Kinnaird, — to whom he thus writes, February 6, 1822:—

“I have got Southey’s pretended reply: what remains to be done is to call him out. The question is, would he come? for, if he would not, the whole thing would appear ridiculous, if I were to take a long and expensive journey to no purpose. You must be my second, and, as such, I wish to consult you. I apply to you as one well versed in the duello, or monomachie. Of course I shall come to England as privately as possible, and leave it (supposing that I was the survivor) in the same manner; having no other object which could bring me to that country except to settle quarrels accumulated during my absence.”

Mr. Kinnaird, justly appreciating the momentary exacerbation under which Byron had written the challenge which this letter inclosed, and fully aware how absurd the whole business would seem to his distant friend after the lapse of such a period as must intervene before the return of post from Keswick to Ravenna, put the warlike missive aside; and it never was heard of by Mr. Southey until after the death of its author. Meantime Byron had continued his “attack in rhyme”—and his “Vision of Judgment,” after ineffectual negotiations with various publishers in London, at length saw the light in 1822, in the pages of the “Liberal.”]

VISION OF JUDGMENT.

I.

SAINT PETER sat by the celestial gate :

His keys were rusty, and the lock was dull,
So little trouble had been given of late ;

Not that the place by any means was full,
But since the Gallic era "eighty-eight"

The devils had ta'en a longer, stronger pull,
And "a pull altogether," as they say
At sea — which drew most souls another way.

II.

The angels all were singing out of tune,

And hoarse with having little else to do,
Excepting to wind up the sun and moon,

Or curb a runaway young star or two,
Or wild colt of a comet, which too soon

Broke out of bounds o'er the ethereal blue,
Splitting some planet with its playful tail,
As boats are sometimes by a wanton whale.

(205)

III.

The guardian seraphs had retired on high,
Finding their charges past all care below ;
Terrestrial business filled nought in the sky
Save the recording angel's black bureau ;
Who found, indeed, the facts to multiply
With such rapidity of vice and wo,
That he had stripped off both his wings in quills,
And yet was in arrear of human ills.

IV.

His business so augmented of late years,
That he was forced, against his will, no doubt,
(Just like those cherubs, earthly ministers,)
For some resource to turn himself about
And claim the help of his celestial peers,
To aid him ere he should be quite worn out
By the increased demand for his remarks ;
Six angels and twelve saints were named his clerks.

V.

This was a handsome board — at least for heaven ;
And yet they had even then enough to do,
So many conquerors' cars were daily driven,
So many kingdoms fitted up anew ;
Each day too slew its thousands six or seven,
Till at the crowning carnage, Waterloo,
They threw their pens down in divine disgust —
The page was so besmeared with blood and dust.

VI.

This by the way ; 't is not mine to record
What angels shrink from : even the very devil
On this occasion his own work abhorred,
So surfeited with the infernal revel :
Though he himself had sharpened every sword
It almost quenched his innate thirst of evil.
(Here Satan's sole good work deserves insertion —
'Tis, that he has both generals in reversion.)

VII.

Let's skip a few short years of hollow peace,
Which peopled earth no better, hell as wont,
And heaven none — they form the tyrant's lease,
With nothing but new names subscribed upon 't ;
'T will one day finish : meantime they increase,
“ With seven heads and ten horns,” and all in front,
Like Saint John's foretold beast ; but ours are born
Less formidable in the head than horn.

VIII.

In the first year of freedom's second dawn *
Died George the Third ; although no tyrant, one
Who shielded tyrants, till each sense withdrawn
Left him nor mental nor external sun :

*[George III. died the 29th of January, 1820, — a year in which the revolutionary spirit broke out all over the south of Europe.]

A better farmer ne'er brushed dew from lawn,
A worse king never left a realm undone !
He died — but left his subjects still behind,
One half as mad — and t' other no less blind.

IX.

He died ! — his death made no great stir on earth ;
His burial made some pomp ; there was profusion
Of velvet, gilding, brass, and no great dearth
Of aught but tears — save those shed by collusion.
For these things may be bought at their true worth ;
Of elegy there was the due infusion —
Bought also ; and the torches, cloaks, and banners,
Heralds, and relics of old Gothic manners,

X.

Formed a sepulchral melodrame. Of all
The fools who flocked to swell or see the show,
Who cared about the corpse ? The funeral
Made the attraction, and the black the wo.
There throbbed not there a thought which pierced the pall ;
And when the gorgeous coffin was laid low,
It seemed the mockery of hell to fold
The rottenness of eighty years in gold.

XI.

So mix his body with the dust ! It might Return to what it must far sooner, were
The natural compound left alone to fight
Its way back into earth, and fire, and air ;

But the unnatural balsams merely blight
What nature made him at his birth, as bare
As the mere million's base unmmmied clay —
Yet all his spices but prolong decay.

XII.

He's dead — and upper earth with him has done ;
He's buried ; save the undertaker's bill,
Or lapidary scrawl, the world is gone
For him, unless he left a German will ;
But where's the proctor who will ask his son ?
In whom his qualities are reigning still,
Except that household virtue, most uncommon,
Of constancy to a bad, ugly woman.

XIII.

"God save the king !" It is a large economy
In God to save the like ; but if he will
Be saving, all the better ; for not one am I
Of those who think damnation better still :
I hardly know too if not quite alone am I
In this small hope of bettering future ill
By circumscribing, with some slight restriction,
The eternity of hell's hot jurisdiction.

XIV.

I know this is unpopular ; I know
'T is blasphemous ; I know one may be damned
For hoping no one else may e'er be so ;
I know my catechism ; I know we are crammed

With the best doctrines till we quite o'erflow ;
I know that all save England's church have shammed,
And that the other twice two hundred churches
And synagogues have made a damned bad purchase.

XV.

God help us all ! God help me too ! I am,
God knows, as helpless as the devil can wish,
And not a whit more difficult to damn
Than is to bring to land a late-hooked fish,
Or to the butcher to purvey the lamb ;
Not that I'm fit for such a noble dish
As one day will be that immortal fry
Of almost everybody born to die.

XVI.

Saint Peter sat by the celestial gate,
And nodded o'er his keys ; when, lo ! there came
A wondrous noise he had not heard of late —
A rushing sound of wind, and stream, and flame ;
In short, a roar of things extremely great,
Which would have made aught save a saint exclaim ;
But he, with first a start and then a wink,
Said, " There's another star gone out, I think ! "

XVII.

But ere he could return to his repose,
A cherub flapped his right wing o'er his eyes —

At which Saint Peter yawned, and rubbed his nose :

“ Saint porter,” said the angel, “ prithee rise ! ”

Waving a goodly wing, which glowed, as glows

An earthly peacock’s tail, with heavenly dyes :

To which the saint replied, “ Well, what’s the matter ?

“ Is Lucifer come back with all this clatter ? ”

XVIII.

“ No,” quoth the cherub ; “ George the Third is dead.” [apostle :

“ And who is George the Third ? ” replied the “ What George ? what Third ? ” “ The king of England,” said

The angel. “ Well ! he won’t find kings to jostle
Him on his way ; but does he wear his head ?

Because the last we saw here had a tussle,
And ne’er would have got into heaven’s good graces,
Had he not flung his head in all our faces.

XIX.

“ He was, if I remember, king of France ; *

That head of his, which could not keep a crown
On earth, yet ventured in my face to advance

A claim to those of martyrs — like my own :
If I had had my sword, as I had once

When I cut ears off, I had cut him down ;
But having but my keys, and not my brand,
I only knocked his head from out his hand.

* [Louis XVI., guillotined in January, 1793.]

XX.

“ And then he set up such a headless howl,
That all the saints came out and took him in;
And there he sits by St. Paul, cheek by jowl;
That fellow Paul — the parvenù ! The skin
Of Saint Bartholomew, which makes his cowl
In heaven, and upon earth redeemed his sin
So as to make a martyr, never sped
Better than did this weak and wooden head.

XXI.

“ But had it come up here upon its shoulders,
There would have been a different tale to tell :
The fellow-feeling in the saints beholders
Seems to have acted on them like a spell ;
And so this very foolish head heaven solders
Back on its trunk : it may be very well,
And seems the custom here to overthrow
Whatever has been wisely done below.”

XXII.

The angel answered, “ Peter ! do not pout :
The king who comes has head and all entire,
And never knew much what it was about —
He did as doth the puppet — by its wire,
And will be judged like all the rest, no doubt :
My business and your own is not to inquire
Into such matters, but to mind our cue —
Which is to act as we are bid to do.”

XXIII.

While thus they spake, the angelic caravan,
Arriving like a rush of mighty wind,
Cleaving the fields of space, as doth the swan
Some silver stream (say Ganges, Nile, or Inde,
Or Thames, or Tweed), and 'midst them an old man
With an old soul, and both extremely blind,
Halted before the gate, and in his shroud
Seated their fellow-traveller on a cloud.

XXIV.

But bringing up the rear of this bright host
A Spirit of a different aspect waved
His wings, like thunder-clouds above some coast Whose barren beach with frequent wrecks is paved ;
His brow was like the deep when tempest-tossed ;
Fierce and unfathomable thoughts engraved
Eternal wrath on his immortal face,
And where he gazed a gloom pervaded space.

XXV.

As he drew near, he gazed upon the gate
Ne'er to be entered more by him or sin,
With such a glance of supernatural hate,
As made Saint Peter wish himself within ;
He pattered with his keys at a great rate,
And sweated through his apostolic skin :
Of course his perspiration was but ichor,
Or some such other spiritual liquor.

XXVI.

The very cherubs huddled all together,
Like birds when soars the falcon; and they felt
A tingling to the tip of every feather,
And formed a circle like Orion's belt
Around their poor old charge; who scarce knew whither
His guards had led him, though they gently dealt
With royal manes (for by many stories,
And true, we learn the angels all are Tories).

XXVII.

As things were in this posture, the gate flew
Asunder, and the flashing of its hinges
Flung over space an universal hue
Of many-colored flame, until its tinges
Reached even our speck of earth, and made a new Aurora borealis spread its fringes
O'er the North Pole; the same seen, when ice-bound,
By Captain Parry's crew, in "Melville's Sound."*

* ["I believe it is almost impossible for words to give an idea of the beauty and variety which this magnificent phenomenon displayed. The luminous arch had broken into irregular masses, streaming with much rapidity in different directions, varying continually in shape and interest, and extending themselves from north, by the east, to north. The usual pale light of the aurora strongly resembled that produced by the combustion of phosphorus; a very slight tinge of red was noticed on this occasion, when the aurora was most vivid, but no other colors were visible." Parry's Voyage in 1819-20.]

XXVIII.

And from the gate thrown open issued beaming
A beautiful and mighty Thing of Light,
Radiant with glory, like a banner streaming
Victorious from some world-o'erthrowing fight:
My poor comparisons must needs be teeming
With earthly likenesses, for here the night
Of clay obscures our best conceptions, saving
Johanna Southcote,* or Bob Southey raving.

XXIX.

'T was the archangel Michael : all men know
The make of angels and archangels, since
There's scarce a scribbler has not one to show,
From the fiends' leader to the angels' prince.
There also are some altar-pieces, though
I really can't say that they much evince
One's inner notions of immortal spirits ;
But let the connoisseurs explain their merits.

XXX.

Michael flew forth in glory and in good ;
A goodly work of him from whom all glory
And good arise ; the portal past — he stood ;
Before him the young cherubs and saints hoary —
(I say young, begging to be understood
By looks, not years ; and should be very sorry

* [Johanna Southcote, the aged lunatic, who fancied herself, and was believed by many followers, to be with child of a new Messiah, died in 1816.]

To state, they were not older than St. Peter,
But merely that they seemed a little sweeter).

XXXI.

The cherubs and the saints bowed down before
That arch-angelic hierarch, the first
Of essences angelical, who wore
The aspect of a god ; but this ne'er nursed
Pride in his heavenly bosom, in whose core
No thought, save for his Maker's service, durst
Intrude, however glorified and high ;
He knew him but the viceroy of the sky.

XXXII.

He and the sombre silent Spirit met —
They knew each other both for good and ill ;
Such was their power, that neither could forget
His former friend and future foe ; but still
There was a high, immortal, proud regret
In either's eye, as if 'twere less their will
Than destiny to make the eternal years
Their date of war, and their "champ clos" the spheres.

XXXIII.

But here they were in neutral space : we know
From Job that Satan hath the power to pay
A heavenly visit thrice a year or so ;
And that "the sons of God," like those of clay,
Must keep him company ; and we might show
From the same book, in how polite a way

The dialogue is held between the Powers
Of Good and Evil — but 't would take up hours.

XXXIV.

And this is not a theologic tract,
To prove with Hebrew and with Arabic
If Job be allegory or a fact,
But a true narrative ; and thus I pick
From out the whole but such and such an act
As sets aside the slightest thought of trick.
'T is every tittle true, beyond suspicion,
And accurate as any other vision.

XXXV.

The spirits were in neutral space, before
The gate of heaven ; like eastern thresholds is
The place where Death's grand cause is argued o'er,
And souls despatched to that world or to this ;
And therefore Michael and the other wore
A civil aspect : though they did not kiss,
Yet still between his Darkness and his Brightness
There passed a mutual glance of great politeness.

XXXVI.

The Archangel bowed, not like a modern beau,
But with a graceful oriental bend,
Pressing one radiant arm just where below
The heart in good men is supposed to tend.
He turned as to an equal, not too low,
But kindly ; Satan met his ancient friend

With more hauteur, as might an old Castilian
Poor noble meet a mushroom rich civilian.

XXXVII.

He merely bent his diabolic brow
An instant ; and then raising it, he stood
In act to assert his right or wrong, and show Cause why King George by no means could or should
Make out a case to be exempt from woe
Eternal, more than other kings, endued
With better sense and hearts, whom history mentions,
Who long have "paved hell with their good intentions."

XXXVIII.

Michael began : "What wouldst thou with this man,
Now dead, and brought before the Lord? What ill
Hath he wrought since his mortal race began,
That thou canst claim him? Speak! and do thy will,
If it be just: if in this earthly span
He hath been greatly failing to fulfil
His duties as a king and mortal, say,
And he is thine; if not, let him have way."

XXXIX.

"Michael!" replied the Prince of Air, "even here,
Before the gate of him thou servest, must
I claim my subject: and will make appear
That as he was my worshipper in dust,

So shall he be in spirit, although dear
To thee and thine, because nor wine nor lust
Were of his weaknesses ; yet on the throne
He reigned o'er millions to serve me alone.

XL.

"Look to our earth, or rather mine ; it was,
Once, more thy master's : but I triumph not
In this poor planet's conquest : nor, alas !
Need he thou servest envy me my lot :
With all the myriads of bright worlds which pass
In worship round him, he may have forgot
Yon weak creation of such paltry things :
I think few worth damnation save their kings,—

XLI.

"And these but as a kind of quit-rent, to Assert my right as lord ; and even had
I such an inclination, 'twere (as you
Well know) superfluous : they are grown so bad,
That hell has nothing better left to do
Than leave them to themselves : so much more mad
And evil by their own internal curse,
Heaven cannot make them better, nor I worse.

XLII.

"Look to the earth, I said, and say again :
When this old, blind, mad, helpless, weak, poor worm

Began in youth's first bloom and flush to reign,
The world and he both wore a different form,
And much of earth and all the watery plain
Of ocean called him king: through many a storm
His isles had floated on the abyss of time;
For the rough virtues chose them for their clime.

XLIII.

"He came to his sceptre young; he leaves it old:
Look to the state in which he found his realm,
And left it; and his annals too behold,
How to a minion first he gave the helm;
How grew upon his heart a thirst for gold,
The beggar's vice, which can but overwhelm
The meanest hearts; and for the rest, but glance
Thine eye along America and France.

XLIV.

"T is true, he was a tool from first to last
(I have the workmen safe); but as a tool
So let him be consumed. From out the past
Of ages, since mankind have known the rule
Of monarchs — from the bloody rolls amassed
Of sin and slaughter — from the Cæsars' school,
Take the worst pupil; and produce a reign
More drenched with gore, more cumbered with the slain.

XLV.

"He ever warred with freedom and the free:
Nations as men, home subjects, foreign foes,

So that they uttered the word 'Liberty !'
Found George the Third their first opponent.
Whose
History was ever stained as his will be
With national and individual woes ?
I grant his household abstinence ; I grant
His neutral virtues, which most monarchs want ;

XLVI.

"I know he was a constant consort ; own
He was a decent sire, and middling lord.
All this is much, and most upon a throne ;
As temperance, if at Apicius' board,
Is more than at an anchorite's supper shown.
I grant him all the kindest can accord ;
And this was well for him, but not for those Millions who found him what oppression chose.

XLVII.

"The New World shook him off ; the Old yet groans
Beneath what he and his prepared, if not Completed : he leaves heirs on many thrones
To all his vices, without what begot
Compassion for him — his tame virtues ; drones
Who sleep, or despots who have now forgot
A lesson which shall be re-taught them, wake
Upon the thrones of earth ; but let them quake !

XLVIII.

"Five millions of the primitive, who hold
The faith which makes ye great on earth, implored

A part of that vast all they held of old, —
 Freedom to worship — not alone your Lord,
 Michael, but you, and you, Saint Peter ! Cold
 Must be your souls, if you have not abhorred
 The foe to catholic participation
 In all the license of a Christian nation.

XLIX.

“ True ! he allowed them to pray God ; but as A consequence of prayer, refused the law
 Which would have placed them upon the same base
 With those who did not hold the saints in awe.”
 But here Saint Peter started from his place,
 And cried, “ You may the prisoner withdraw :
 Ere heaven shall ope her portals to this Guelph,
 While I am guard, may I be damned myself !

L.

“ Sooner will I with Cerberus exchange
 My office (and his is no sinecure)
 Than see this royal Bedlam bigot range
 The azure fields of heaven, of that be sure ! ”
 “ Saint ! ” replied Satan, “ you do well to avenge
 The wrongs he made your satellites endure ; *
 And if to this exchange you should be given,
 I’ll try to coax our Cerberus up to heaven.”

LI.

Here Michael interposed : “ Good saint ! and devil !
 Pray, not so fast ; you both outrun discretion.

* [George III.’s opposition to the Catholic claims.]

Saint Peter! you were wont to be more civil:

Satan! excuse this warmth of his expression,
And condescension to the vulgar's level:

Even saints sometimes forget themselves in session. [please,

Have you got more to say?" — "No." — "If you
I'll trouble you to call your witnesses."

LII.

Then Satan turned and waved his swarthy hand,

Which stirred with its electric qualities
Clouds further off than we can understand,

Although we find him sometimes in our skies;
Infernal thunder shook both sea and land

In all the planets, and hell's batteries
Let off the artillery, which Milton mentions
As one of Satan's most sublime inventions.

LIII.

This was a signal unto such damned souls

As have the privilege of their damnation
Extended far beyond the mere controls

Of worlds past, present, or to come; no station
Is theirs particularly in the rolls

Of hell assigned; but where their inclination
Or business carries them in search of game,
They may range freely — being damned the same.

LIV.

They are proud of this — as very well they may,
It being a sort of knighthood, or gilt key

Stuck in their loins ;* or like to an "entré"

Up the back stairs, or such free-masonry.

I borrow my comparisons from clay,

Being clay myself. Let not those spirits be Offended with such base low likenesses ;

We know their posts are nobler far than these.

LV.

When the great signal ran from heaven to hell—

About ten million times the distance reckoned
From our sun to its earth, as we can tell

How much time it takes up, even to a second,
For every ray that travels to dispel

The fogs of London, through which, dimly bea-coned,

The weathercocks are gilt some thrice a year,
If that the summer is not too severe : — †

LVI.

I say that I can tell — 't was half a minute :

I know the solar beams take up more time
Ere, packed up for their journey, they begin it ;

But then their telegraph is less sublime,
And if they ran a race, they would not win it

'Gainst Satan's couriers bound for their own clime.

* [A gold or gilt key, peeping from below the skirts of the coat, marks a lord chamberlain.]

† [An allusion to Horace Walpole's expression in a letter—
"the summer has set in with its usual severity."]

The sun takes up some years for every ray
To reach its goal—the devil not half a day.

LVII.

Upon the verge of space, about the size
Of half-a-crown, a little speck appeared
(I've seen a something like it in the skies
In the Ægean, ere a squall) ; it neared
And growing bigger, took another guise ;
Like an aërial ship it tacked, and steered,
Or was steered (I am doubtful of the grammar
Of the last phrase, which makes the stanza stammer ; —

LVIII.

But take your choice) ; and then it grew a cloud ;
And so it was — a cloud of witnesses.
But such a cloud ! No land e'er saw a crowd
Of locusts numerous as the heavens saw these ;
They shadowed with their myriads space ; their loud
And varied cries were like those of wild geese
(If nations may be likened to a goose),
And realized the phrase of " hell broke loose."

LIX.

Here crashed a sturdy oath of stout John Bull,
Who damned away his eyes as heretofore :
There Paddy brogued " By Jasus ! " — " What's your wull ? "

The temperate Scot exclaimed : the French ghost swore

In certain terms I sha' n't translate in full,
As the first coachman will ; and 'midst the war,
The voice of Jonathan was heard to express,
“ Our president is going to war, I guess.”

LX.

Besides there were the Spaniard, Dutch, and Dane ;
In short, an universal shoal of shades,
From Otaheite's isle to Salisbury Plain,
Of all climes and professions, years and trades,
Ready to swear against the good king's reign,
Bitter as clubs in cards are against spades :
All summoned by this grand “ subpoena,” to Try if kings may n't be damned like me or you.

LXI.

When Michael saw this host, he first grew pale,
As angels can ; next, like Italian twilight,
He turned all colors — as a peacock's tail,
Or sunset streaming through a Gothic skylight
In some old abbey, or a trout not stale,
Or distant lightning on the horizon by night,
Or a fresh rainbow, or a grand review
Of thirty regiments in red, green, and blue.

LXII.

Then he addressed himself to Satan : “ Why —
My good old friend, for such I deem you, though
Our different parties make us fight so shy,
I ne'er mistake you for a personal foe ;

Our difference is political, and I
Trust that, whatever may occur below,
You know my great respect for you: and this Makes me regret whate'er you do amiss —

LXIII.

"Why, my dear Lucifer, would you abuse
My call for witnesses? I did not mean
That you should half of earth and hell produce;
'T is even superfluous, since two honest, clean,
True testimonies are enough: we lose
Our time, nay, our eternity, between
The accusation and defence: if we Hear both, 't will stretch our immortality."

LXIV.

Satan replied, "To me the matter is Indifferent, in a personal point of view:
I can have fifty better souls than this
With far less trouble than we have gone through Already; and I merely argued his Late majesty of Britain's case with you
Upon a point of form: you may dispose
Of him; I've kings enough below, God knows!"

LXV.

Thus spoke the Demon (late called "multifaced"
By multo-scribbling Southey). "Then we'll call
One or two persons of the myriads placed
Around our congress, and dispense with all

The rest," quoth Michael : " Who may be so graced
As to speak first ? there 's choice enough — who shall

It be ?" Then Satan answered, " There are many ;
But you may choose Jack Wilkes as well as any."

LXVI.

A merry, cock-eyed, curious looking sprite
Upon the instant started from the throng,
Dressed in a fashion now forgotten quite ;
For all the fashions of the flesh stick long
By people in the next world ; where unite
All the costumes since Adam's, right or wrong,
From Eve's fig-leaf down to the petticoat,
Almost as scanty, of days less remote.

LXVII.

The spirit looked around upon the crowds
Assembled, and exclaimed, " My friends of all
The spheres, we shall catch cold amongst these clouds ;

So let's to business : why this general call ?
If those are freeholders I see in shrouds,
And 't is for an election that they bawl,
Behold a candidate with unturned coat !
Saint Peter, may I count upon your vote ?"

LXVIII.

" Sir," replied Michael, " you mistake ; these things
Are of a former life, and what we do

Above is more august ; to judge of kings

Is the tribunal met : so now you know."

"Then I presume those gentlemen with wings,"

Said Wilkes, "are cherubs ; and that soul below
Looks much like George the Third, but to my mind
A good deal older — Bless me ! is he blind?"

LXIX.

"He is what you behold him, and his doom

Depends upon his deeds," the Angel said.

"If you have aught to arraign in him, the tomb

Gives license to the humblest beggar's head

To lift itself against the loftiest." — "Some,"

Said Wilkes, "don't wait to see them laid in lead,

For such a liberty — and I, for one,

Have told them what I thought beneath the sun."

LXX.

"Above the sun repeat, then, what thou hast

To urge against him," said the Archangel. "Why,"

Replied the spirit, "since old scores are past,

Must I turn evidence ? In faith, not I.

Besides, I beat him hollow at the last,

With all his Lords and Commons : in the sky

I don't like ripping up old stories, since

His conduct was but natural in a prince.

LXXI.

"Foolish, no doubt, and wicked, to oppress

A poor unlucky devil without a shilling ;

But then I blame the man himself much less
 Than Bute and Grafton, and shall be unwilling
 To see him punished here for their excess,
 Since they were both damned long ago, and still in Their place below : for me, I have forgiven,
 And vote his 'habeas corpus' into heaven."

LXXII.

"Wilkes," said the Devil, "I understand all this ;
 You turned to half a courtier ere you died,*
 And seem to think it would not be amiss
 To grow a whole one on the other side
 Of Charon's ferry ; you forget that his Reign is concluded ; whatsoe'er betide,
 He won't be sovereign more : you've lost your labor,
 For at the best he will but be your neighbor.

LXXIII.

"However, I knew what to think of it,
 When I beheld you in your jesting way
 Flitting and whispering round about the spit
 Where Belial, upon duty for the day,
 With Fox's lard was basting William Pitt,
 His pupil ; I knew what to think, I say :
 That fellow even in hell breathes further ills ;
 I'll have him gagged — 't was one of his own bills.

*[For the political history of John Wilkes, who died chamberlain of the city of London, we must refer to any history of the reign of George III. His profligate personal character is abundantly displayed in the collection of his letters, published by his daughter ! since his death.]

LXXIV.

“ Call Junius ! ” From the crowd a shadow stalked,
And at the name there was a general squeeze,
So that the very ghosts no longer walked
In comfort, at their own aerial ease,
But were all rammed, and jammed (but to be balked,
As we shall see), and jostled hands and knees,
Like wind compressed and pent within a bladder,
Or like a human colic, which is sadder.

LXXV.

The shadow came — a tall, thin, gray-haired figure,
That looked as it had been a shade on earth ;
Quick in its motions, with an air of vigor,
But nought to mark its breeding or its birth :
Now it waxed little, then again grew bigger,
With now an air of gloom, or savage mirth ;
But as you gazed upon its features, they Changed every instant — to what, none could say.

LXXVI.

The more intently the ghosts gazed, the less
Could they distinguish whose the features were ;
The Devil himself seemed puzzled even to guess ;
They varied like a dream — now here, now there ;
And several people swore from out the press,
They knew him perfectly ; and one could swear
He was his father : upon which another
Was sure he was his mother's cousin's brother :

LXXVII.

Another, that he was a duke, or knight,
 An orator, a lawyer, or a priest,
 A nabob, a man-midwife; * but the wight
 Mysterious changed his countenance at least
 As oft as they their minds: though in full sight
 He stood, the puzzle only was increased;
 The man was a phantasmagoria in Himself—he was so volatile and thin.†

LXXVIII.

The moment that you had pronounced him one,
 Presto! his face changed, and he was another;
 And when that change was hardly well put on,
 It varied, till I don't think his own mother
 (If that he had a mother) would her son
 Have known, he shifted so from one to t' other;
 Till guessing from a pleasure grew a task,
 At this epistolary "Iron Mask." ‡

* [Among the various persons to whom the letters of Junius have been attributed we find the Duke of Portland, Lord George Sackville, Sir Philip Francis, Mr. Burke, Mr. Dunning, the Rev. John Horne Tooke, Mr. Hugh Boyd, Dr. Wilmot, etc.]

† ["I don't know what to think. Why should Junius be dead? If suddenly apoplexed, would he rest in his grave without sending his εἰδωλον to shout in the ears of posterity, 'Junius was X. Y. Z., Esq. buried in the parish of .' Repair his monument, ye churchwardens! Print a new edition of his Letters, ye booksellers! Impossible,—the man must be alive, and will never die without the disclosure. I like him;—he was a good hater." — Byron's Diary, Nov. 28, 1813.]

‡ [The mystery of "l'homme au masque de fer," the everlast-

LXXXIX.

For sometimes he like Cerberus would seem — “Three gentlemen at once” (as sagely says Good Mrs. Malaprop); then you might deem
 That he was not even one; now many rays
 Were flashing round him; and now a thick steam
 Hid him from sight — like fogs on London days :
 Now Burke, now Tooke, he grew to people’s fancies,
 And certes often like Sir Philip Francis.*

LXXX.

I’ve an hypothesis — ’t is quite my own ;
 I never let it out till now, for fear
 Of doing people harm about the throne,
 And injuring some minister or peer,
 On whom the stigma might perhaps be blown :
 It is — my gentle public, lend thine ear !
 ’Tis, that what Junius we are wont to call
 Was really, truly, nobody at all.

ing puzzle of the last century, has in the opinion of some, been cleared up, by a French work published in 1825, and which formed the basis of an entertaining one in English by Lord Dover.]

* [That the work entitled “The Identity of Junius with a distinguished Living Character established” proves Sir Philip Francis to be Junius, we will not affirm; but this we can safely assert, that it accumulates such a mass of circumstantial evidence, as renders it extremely difficult to believe he is not, and that, if so many coincidences shall be found to have misled us in this case, our faith in all conclusions drawn from proofs of a similar kind may henceforth be shaken. — MACKINTOSH.]

LXXXI.

I don't see wherefore letters should not be Written without hands, since we daily view
Them written without heads; and books, we see,
Are filled as well without the latter too :
And really till we fix on somebody
For certain sure to claim them as his due,
Their author, like the Niger's mouth, will bother
The world to say if there be mouth or author.

LXXXII.

"And who and what art thou?" the Archangel said.
"For that you may consult my title-page,"
Replied this mighty shadow of a shade :
"If I have kept my secret half an age,
I scarce shall tell it now." — "Canst thou upbraid," Continued Michael, "George Rex, or allege Aught further?" Junius answered, "You had better
First ask him for his answer to my letter :

LXXXIII.

"My charges upon record will outlast
The brass of both his epitaph and tomb."
"Repent'st thou not," said Michael, "of some past
Exaggeration? something which may doom
Thyself if false, as him if true? Thou wast
Too bitter — is it not so? — in thy gloom
Of passion?" — "Passion!" cried the phantom dim,
"I loved my country, and I hated him.

LXXXIV.

“What I have written, I have written : let
The rest be on his head or mine !” So spoke
Old “Nominis Umbra ;” * and while speaking yet,
Away he melted in a celestial smoke.
Then Satan said to Michael, “Don’t forget
To call George Washington, and John Horne
Tooke,
And Franklin ;” — but at this time there was heard
A cry for room, though not a phantom stirred.

LXXXV.

At length with jostling, elbowing, and the aid
Of cherubim appointed to that post,
The devil Asmodeus to the circle made
His way, and looked as if his journey cost
Some trouble. When his burden down he laid, “What’s this ?” cried Michael ; “why, ’tis not a ghost ?”
“I know it,” quoth the incubus ; “but he Shall be one, if you leave the affair to me.

LXXXVI.

“Confound the renegado ! I have sprained
My left wing, he’s so heavy ; one would think
Some of his works about his neck were chained.
But to the point ; while hovering o’er the brink

* [The well known motto of Junius is, “stat nominis umbra.”]

Of Skiddaw * (where as usual it still rained),
I saw a taper, far below me, wink,
And stooping, caught this fellow at a libel —
No less on history than the Holy Bible.

LXXXVII.

“The former is the devil’s scripture, and
The latter yours, good Michael; so the affair
Belongs to all of us, you understand.
I snatched him up just as you see him there,
And brought him off for sentence out of hand:
I’ve scarcely been ten minutes in the air —
At least a quarter it can hardly be:
I dare say that his wife is still at tea.”

LXXXVIII.

Here Satan said, “I know this man of old,
And have expected him for some time here;
A sillier fellow you will scarce behold,
Or more conceited in his petty sphere:
But surely it was not worth while to fold
Such trash below your wing, Asmodeus dear:
We had the poor wretch safe (without being bored
With carriage) coming of his own accord.

LXXXIX.

“But since he’s here, let’s see what he has done.”
“Done!” cried Asmodeus, “he anticipates

* [Southey’s residence was on the shore of Derwentwater, near the mountain Skiddaw.]

The very business you are now upon,
 And scribbles as if head clerk to the Fates.
 Who knows to what his ribaldry may run,
 When such an ass as this, like Balaam's, prates ?"
 "Let's hear," quoth Michael, "what he has to say :
 You know we're bound to that in every way."

XC.

Now the bard, glad to get an audience, which
 By no means often was his case below,
 Began to cough, and hawk, and hem, and pitch
 His voice into that awful note of woe
 To all unhappy hearers within reach
 Of poets when the tide of rhyme's in flow ;
 But stuck fast with his first hexameter,
 Not one of all whose gouty feet would stir.

XCL.

But ere the spavined dactyls could be spurred
 Into recitative, in great dismay
 Both cherubim and seraphim were heard
 To murmur loudly through their long array ;
 And Michael rose ere he could get a word
 Of all his foundered verses under way,
 And cried, "For God's sake stop, my friend ! 'twere best —
Non Di, non homines — you know the rest." *

* [Mediocribus esse poetis

Non Di, non homines, non concessere columnæ. — Horace.]

XCII.

A general bustle spread throughout the throng,
 Which seemed to hold all verse in detestation ;
 The angels had of course enough of song
 When upon service ; and the generation
 Of ghosts had heard too much in life, not long Before, to profit by a new occasion ; [what !*
 The monarch, mute till then, exclaimed, " What !
Pye † come again ? No more — no more of that !"

XCIII.

The tumult grew ; an universal cough
 Convulsed the skies, as during a debate,
 When Castlereagh has been up long enough
 (Before he was first minister of state, [off !"
 I mean — the slaves hear now) ; some cried " Off,
 As at a farce ; till, grown quite desperate,
 The bard Saint Peter prayed to interpose
 (Himself an author) only for his prose.

XCIV.

The varlet was not an ill-favored knave ;
 A good deal like a vulture in the face,

* [The king's trick of repeating his words in this way was a fertile source of ridicule to Peter Pindar (Dr. Wolcot).]

† [Henry James Pye, the predecessor of Southey in the post-laureateship, died in 1818. He was the author of many works besides his official Odes, among others " Alfred," an epic poem. Pye was a man of good family in Berkshire, sat some time in parliament, and was eminently respectable in every thing but his poetry.]

With a hook nose and a hawk's eye, which gave
A smart and sharper-looking sort of grace
To his whole aspect, which, though rather grave,
Was by no means so ugly as his case ;
But that indeed was hopeless as can be,
Quite a poetic felony "de se."

XCV.

Then Michael blew his trump, and stilled the noise
With one still greater, as is yet the mode
On earth besides ; except some grumbling voice,
Which now and then will make a slight inroad
Upon decorous silence, few will twice
Lift up their lungs when fairly overcrowded ;
And now the bard could plead his own bad cause,
With all the attitudes of self-applause.

XCVI.

He said — (I only give the heads) — he said,
He meant no harm in scribbling ; 't was his way
Upon all topics ; 't was, besides, his bread,
Of which he buttered both sides ; 't would delay
Too long the assembly (he was pleased to dread),
And take up rather more time than a day,
To name his works — he would but cite a few —
" Wat Tyler " — " Rhymes on Blenheim " — " Waterloo."

XCVII.

He had written praises of a regicide ;
He had written praises of all kings whatever ;

He had written for republics far and wide,
 And then against them bitterer than ever :
 For pantisocracy he once had cried
 Aloud, a scheme less moral than 't was clever ;
 Then grew a hearty anti-jacobin —
 Had turned his coat — and would have turned his skin.

XCVIII.

He had sung against all battles, and again
 In their high praise and glory ; he had called Reviewing * “the ungentle craft,” and then
 Become as base a critic as e'er crawled —
 Fed, paid, and pampered by the very men
 By whom his muse and morals had been mauled :
 He had written much blank verse, and blanker prose,
 And more of both than anybody knows.†

XCIX.

He had written Wesley's life : — here turning round
 To Satan, “Sir, I'm ready to write yours,

* See “Life of Henry Kirke White.”

† [This sarcasm about Southey's professional authorship comes with a bad grace from a man who, for several years, has been in the habit of receiving several thousand pounds per annum, all for value received in Verse and Prose, from the magnificent exchequer of Albemarle Street. What right has Lord Byron to sneer at Southey as a “writer of all work?” Has he not himself published, within these two years, two volumes of tragic blank verse; one volume of licentious ottava rima; one pamphlet of clever polemical criticism, seasoned with personalities against all sorts of men; besides writing an Armenian grammar? — Blackwood, 1822.]

In two octavo volumes, nicely bound,
 With notes and preface, all that most allures
 The pious purchaser ; and there's no ground
 For fear, for I can choose my own reviewers :
 So let me have the proper documents,
 That I may add you to my other saints."

C.

Satan bowed, and was silent. " Well, if you,
 With amiable modesty, decline
 My offer, what says Michael ? There are few
 Whose memoirs could be rendered more divine.
 Mine is a pen of all work ; not so new
 As it was once, but I would make you shine
 Like your own trumpet. By the way, my own
 Has more of brass in it, and is as well blown.

CL.

" But talking about trumpets, here's my Vision !
 Now you shall judge, all people ; yes, you shall Judge with my judgment, and by my decision
 Be guided who shall enter heaven or fall.
 I settle all these things by intuition,
 Times present, past, to come, heaven, hell, and all,
 Like King Alfonso.* When I thus see double,
 I save the Deity some worlds of trouble."

* Alfonso, speaking of the Ptolomean system, said, that " had he been consulted at the creation of the world, he would have spared the Maker some absurdities."

CII.

He ceased, and drew forth an MS.; and no
 Persuasion on the part of devils, or saints,
 Or angels, now could stop the torrent ; so
 He read the first three lines of the contents ;
 But at the fourth, the whole spiritual show
 Had vanished, with variety of scents,
 Ambrosial and sulphureous, as they sprang,
 Like lightning, off from his "melodious twang." *

CIII.

Those grand heroics acted as a spell ;
 The angels stopped their ears and plied their pinions ;

* See Aubrey's account of the apparition which disappeared "with a curious perfume and a most melodious twang ;" or see the "Antiquary," vol. i. p. 225. — ["As the vision shut his volume, a strain of delightful music seemed to fill the apartment." — "The usual time," says Grose, "at which ghosts make their appearance is midnight, and seldom before it is dark ; though some audacious spirits have been said to appear even by day-light ; but of this there are few instances, and those mostly ghosts who had been laid, and whose terms of confinement were expired. I cannot learn that ghosts carry tapers in their hands, as they are sometimes depicted. Dragging chains is not the fashion of English ghosts : chains and black vestments being chiefly the accoutrements of foreign spectres seen in arbitrary governments ; dead or alive, English spirits are free. During the narration of its business, a ghost must by no means be interrupted by questions of any kind : its narration being completed, it vanishes away, frequently in a flash of light ; in which case, some ghosts have been so considerate as to desire the party to whom they appeared to shut their eyes : — sometimes its departure is attended with most delightful music." — Provincial Glossary.]

The devils ran howling, deafened, down to hell ;
 The ghosts fled, gibbering, for their own dominions —
 (For 'tis not yet decided where they dwell,
 And I leave every man to his opinions) ;
 Michael took refuge in his trump — but, lo !
 His teeth were set on edge, he could not blow !

CIV.

Saint Peter, who has hitherto been known
 For an impetuous saint, upraised his keys,
 And at the fifth line knocked the poet down ;
 Who fell like Phæton, but more at ease,
 Into his lake, for there he did not drown ;
 A different web being by the Destinies
 Woven for the Laureate's final wreath, whene'er
 Reform shall happen either here or there.

CV.

He first sank to the bottom — like his works,
 But soon rose to the surface — like himself ;
 For all corrupted things are buoyed like corks,*
 By their own rottenness, light as an elf,
 Or wisp that flits o'er a morass : he lurks,
 It may be, still, like dull books on a shelf,
 In his own den, to scrawl some " Life " or " Vision," †
 As Welborn says — " the devil turned precisian."

* A drowned body lies at the bottom till rotten ; it then floats, as most people know.

As for the rest, to come to the conclusion
Of this true dream, the telescope is gone
Which kept my optics free from all delusion,
And showed me what I in my turn have shown ;
All I saw further, in the last confusion,
Was, that King George slipped into heaven for one ;
And when the tumult dwindled to a calm, judged, and not a well-executed work. Milton alone has ever founded a fiction on the basis of revelation, without degrading his subject; but Milton has been blamed by the most judicious critics, and his warmest admirers, for expressing the counsels of Eternal Wisdom, and the decrees of Almighty Power, by words assigned to the Deity. It is impossible to deceive ourselves into a momentary and poetical belief that words proceeded from the Holy Spirit, except on the warrant of inspiration itself. It is here only that Milton fails, and here Milton sometimes shocks. The blasphemies of Milton's devils offend not a pious ear, because they are devils who utter them. Nor are we displeased with the poet's presumption in feigning language for heavenly spirits, because it is a language that lifts the soul to heaven. The words are human; but the truths they express, and the doctrines they teach, are divine. — Blackwood, 1822.]

AGE OF BRONZE ;

* [This poem was written at Genoa, in the early part of the year 1828; and published in London, by Mr. John Hunt. Its authenticity was much disputed at the time.]

THE AGE OF BRONZE.

I.

THE "good old times"—all times when old are good—

Are gone; the present might be if they would;
Great things have been, and are, and greater still Want little of mere mortals but their will:
A wider space, a greener field, is given
To those who play their "tricks before high heaven."
I know not if the angels weep, but men
Have wept enough—for what?—to weep again!

II.

All is exploded—be it good or bad.
Reader! remember when thou wert a lad,
Then Pitt was all; or, if not all, so much,
His very rival almost deemed him such.*
We, we have seen the intellectual race
Of giants stand, like Titans, face to face—

* [Mr. Fox used to say—"I never want a word, but Pitt never wants the word."]

Athos and Ida, with a dashing sea
Of eloquence between, which flowed all free,
As the deep billows of the Ægean roar
Betwixt the Hellenic and the Phrygian shore.
But where are they — the rivals! — a few feet
Of sullen earth divide each winding sheet.*
How peaceful and how powerful is the grave
Which hushes all! a calm, unstormy wave
Which oversweeps the world. The theme is old
Of “dust to dust;” but half its tale untold:
Time tempers not its terrors — still the worm
Winds its cold folds, the tomb preserves its form,
Varied above, but still alike below;
The urn may shine, the ashes will not glow,
Though Cleopatra’s mummy cross the sea
O’er which from empire she lured Anthony;
Though Alexander’s urn a show be grown
On shores he wept to conquer, though unknown —
How vain, how worse than vain, at length appear
The madman’s wish, the Macedonian’s tear!
He wept for worlds to conquer — half the earth
Knows not his name, or but his death, and birth,
And desolation; while his native Greece
Hath all of desolation, save its peace.
He “wept for worlds to conquer!” he who ne’er
Conceived the globe, he panted not to spare!

* [The grave of Mr. Fox, in Westminster Abbey, is within eighteen inches of that of Mr. Pitt.]

With even the busy Northern Isle unknown,
Which holds his urn, and never knew his throne.*

III.

But where is he, the modern, mightier far,
Who, born no king, made monarchs draw his car;
The new Sesostris, whose unharnessed kings,†
Freed from the bit, believe themselves with wings,
And spurn the dust o'er which they crawled of late,
Chained to the chariot of the chieftain's state?
Yes! where is he, the champion and the child
Of all that's great or little, wise or wild?
Whose game was empires, and whose stakes were thrones?
Whose table earth— whose dice were human bones?
Behold the grand result in yon lone isle, ‡
And, as thy nature urges, weep or smile.
Sigh to behold the eagle's lofty rage
Reduced to nibble at his narrow cage;
Smile to survey the queller of the nations
Now daily squabbling o'er disputed rations;
Weep to perceive him mourning, as he dines,
O'er curtailed dishes and o'er stinted wines;

* [The sarcophagus, of breccia, which is supposed to have contained the dust of Alexander, came into the possession of the English army, at the capitulation of Alexandria in 1802, and is now in the British Museum.]

† [Sesostris is said, by Diodorus, to have had his chariot drawn by eight vanquished sovereigns.]

‡ [St. Helena.]

O'er petty quarrels upon petty things.
 Is this the man who scourged or feasted kings?
 Behold the scales in which his fortune hangs,
 A surgeon's * statement, and an earl's † harangues !
 A bust delayed, ‡ a book refused, can shake
 The sleep of him who kept the world awake.
 Is this indeed the tamer of the great,
 Now slave of all could tease or irritate —
 The paltry gaoler § and the prying spy,
 The staring stranger with his note-book nigh ? ||
 Plunged in a dungeon, he had still been great ;
 How low, how little was this middle state,
 Between a prison and a palace, where
 How few could feel for what he had to bear !
 Vain his complaint, — my lord presents his bill,
 His food and wine were doled out duly still :
 Vain was his sickness, never was a clime
 So free from homicide — to doubt's a crime ;
 And the stiff surgeon, who maintained his cause,
 Hath lost his place, and gained the world's applause.
 But smile — though all the pangs of brain and heart
 Disdain, defy, the tardy aid of art ;
 Though, save the few fond friends and imaged face
 Of that fair boy his sire shall ne'er embrace,
 None stand by his low bed — though even the mind
 Be wavering, which long awed and awes mankind :

§ [Sir Hudson Lowe.]

|| [Captain Basil Hall's interesting account of his interview with the ex-emperor occurs in his "Voyage to Loo-choo."]

Smile — for the fettered eagle breaks his chain,
And higher worlds than this are his again.*

IV.

How, if that soaring spirit still retain
A conscious twilight of his blazing reign,
How must he smile, on looking down, to see
The little that he was and sought to be !
What though his name a wider empire found
Than his ambition, though with scarce a bound ;
Though first in glory, deepest in reverse,
He tasted empire's blessings and its curse ;
Though kings rejoicing in their late escape
From chains, would gladly be their tyrant's ape ;
How must he smile, and turn to yon lone grave,
The proudest sea-mark that o'ertops the wave !
What though his goaler, duteous to the last,
Scarce deemed the coffin's lead could keep him fast,
Refusing one poor line along the lid,
To date the birth and death of all it hid ;
That name shall hallow the ignoble shore,
A talisman to all save him who bore :
The fleets that sweep before the eastern blast
Shall hear their sea-boys hail it from the mast ;
When Victory's Gallic column shall but rise,
Like Pompey's pillar, in a desert's skies,
The rocky isle that holds or held his dust
Shall crown the Atlantic like the hero's bust,

* [Buonaparte died the 5th of May, 1821.]

And mighty nature o'er his obsequies
Do more than niggard envy still denies.
But what are these to him? Can glory's lust
Touch the freed spirit or the fettered dust?
Small care hath he of what his tomb consists;
Nought if he sleeps — nor more if he exists:
Alike the better-seeing shade will smile
On the rude cavern of the rocky isle,
As if his ashes found their latest home
In Rome's Pantheon or Gaul's mimic dome.
He wants not this; but France shall feel the want
Of this last consolation, though so scant;
Her honor, fame, and faith demand his bones,
To rear above a pyramid of thrones;
Or carried onward in the battle's van,
To form, like Guesclin's * dust, her talisman.
But be it as it is — the time may come
His name shall beat the alarm, like Ziska's drum.†

V.

Oh heaven! of which he was in power a feature;
Oh Earth! of which he was a noble creature;

* [Guesclin, constable of France, died in the midst of his triumphs, before Châteauneuf de Randon, in 1380. The English garrison, which had conditioned to surrender at a certain time, marched out the day after his death; and the commander respectfully laid the keys of the fortress on the bier, so that it might appear to have surrendered to his ashes.]

† [John Ziska — a distinguished leader of the Hussites. It is recorded of him, that, in dying, he ordered his skin to be made the covering of a drum. The Bohemians hold his memory in superstitious veneration.]

Thou isle! to be remembered long and well,
That saw'st the unfledged eaglet chip his shell!
Ye Alps, which viewed him in his dawning flights
Hover, the victor of a hundred fights!
Thou Rome, who saw'st thy Cæsar's deeds outdone!
Alas! why passed he too the Rubicon —
The Rubicon of man's awakened rights,
To herd with vulgar kings and parasites?
Egypt! from whose all dateless tombs arose
Forgotten Pharaohs from their long repose,
And shook within their pyramids to hear
A new Cambyzes thundering in their ear;
While the dark shades of forty ages stood
Like startled giants by Nile's famous flood;
Or from the pyramid's tall pinnacle
Beheld the desert peopled, as from hell,
With clashing hosts, who strewed the barren sand
To re-manure the uncultivated land!
Spain! which, a moment mindless of the Cid,
Beheld his banner flouting thy Madrid!
Austria! which saw thy twice-ta'en capital
Twice spared to be the traitress of his fall!
Ye race of Frederic! — Frederics but in name
And falsehood — heirs to all except his fame;
Who, crushed at Jena, crouched at Berlin, fell
First, and but rose to follow! Ye who dwell
Where Kosciusko dwelt, remembering yet
The unpaid amount of Catherine's bloody debt!
Poland — o'er which the avenging angel past,
But left thee as he found thee, still a waste,

Forgetting all thy still enduring claim,
Thy lotted people and extinguished name,
Thy sigh for freedom, thy long-flowing tear,
That sound that crashes in the tyrant's ear —
Kosciusko ! On — on — on — the thirst of war
Gasp for the gore of serfs and of their czar.
The half barbaric Moscow's minarets
Gleam in the sun, but 'tis a sun that sets !
Moscow ! thou limit of his long career,
For which rude Charles had wept his frozen tear
To see in vain — he saw thee — how ? with spire
And palace fuel to one common fire.
To this the soldier lent his kindling match,
To this the peasant gave his cottage thatch,
To this the merchant flung his hoarded store,
The prince his hall — and Moscow was no
more !

Sublimest of volcanoes ! Etna's flame
Pales before thine, and quenchless Hecla's tame ;
Vesuvius shows his blaze, an usual sight
For gaping tourists, from his hackneyed height :
Thou stand'st alone unrivalled, till the fire
To come, in which all empires shall expire !

Thou other element ! as strong and stern,
To teach a lesson conquerors will not learn ! —
Whose icy wing flapped o'er the faltering foe,
Till fell a hero with each flake of snow ;
How did thy numbing beak and silent fang
Pierce, till hosts perished with a single pang !

In vain shall Seine look up along his banks
For the gay thousands of his dashing ranks !
In vain shall France recall beneath her vines
Her youth — their blood flows faster than her wines ;
Or stagnant in their human ice remains
In frozen mummies on the Polar plains.
In vain will Italy's broad sun awaken
Her offspring chilled ; its beams are now forsaken.
Of all the trophies gathered from the war,
What shall return ? — the conqueror's broken car !
The conqueror's yet unbroken heart ! Again
The horn of Roland sounds, and not in vain.
Lutzen, where fell the Swede of victory,*
Beholds him conquer, but, alas ! not die :
Dresden surveys three despots fly once more
Before their sovereign, — sovereign as before ;
But there exhausted Fortune quits the field,
And Leipsic's treason bids the unvanquished yield ;
The Saxon jackal leaves the lion's side
To turn the bear's, and wolf's, and fox's guide ;
And backward to the den of his despair
The forest monarch shrinks, but finds no lair !

Oh ye ! and each, and all ! Oh France ! who found
Thy long fair fields, ploughed up as hostile ground,
Disputed foot by foot, till treason, still
His only victor, from Montmartre's hill

* [Gustavus Adolphus fell at the great battle of Lutzen, in November, 1632.]

Looked down o'er trampled Paris! and thou Isle,*
Which seest Etruria from thy ramparts smile,
Thou momentary shelter of his pride,
Till wooed by danger, his yet weeping bride!
Oh, France! retaken by a single march,
Whose path was through one long triumphal arch!
Oh, bloody and most bootless Waterloo!
Which proves how fools may have their fortune too,
Won half by blunder, half by treachery:
Oh, dull Saint Helen! with thy gaoler nigh —
Hear! hear Prometheus † from his rock appeal
To earth, air, ocean, all that felt or feel
His power and glory, all who yet shall hear
A name eternal as the rolling year;
He teaches them the lesson taught so long,
So oft, so vainly — learn to do no wrong!
A single step into the right had made
This man the Washington of worlds betrayed:
A single step into the wrong has given
His name a doubt to all the winds of heaven;
The reed of Fortune, and of thrones the rod,
Of Fame the Moloch or the demigod;
His country's Cæsar, Europe's Hannibal,
Without their decent dignity of fall.
Yet Vanity herself had better taught
A surer path even to the fame he sought,

By pointing out on history's fruitless page
 Ten thousand conquerors for a single sage.
 While Franklin's quiet memory climbs to heaven,
 Calming the lightning which he thence hath riven,
 Or drawing from the no less kindled earth
 Freedom and peace to that which boasts his birth; *
 While Washington's a watchword, such as ne'er
 Shall sink while there's an echo left to air: †
 While even the Spaniard's thirst of gold and war
 Forgets Pizarro to shout Bolivar!
 Alas! why must the same Atlantic wave
 Which wafted freedom gird a tyrant's grave —
 The king of kings, and yet of slaves the slave,
 Who bursts the chains of millions to renew
 The very fetters which his arm broke through,
 And crushed the rights of Europe and his own,
 To flit between a dungeon and a throne?

VI.

But 'twill not be — the spark's awakened — lo!
 The swarthy Spaniard feels his former glow;
 The same high spirit which beat back the Moor
 Through eight long ages of alternate gore
 Revives — and where? in that avenging clime
 Where Spain was once synonymous with crime,

* [The celebrated motto on a French medal of Franklin was—

“Eripuit cælo fulmen, sceptrumque tyrannis.”]

† [“To be the first man (not the Dictator), not the Sylla, but the Washington, or Aristides, the leader in talent and truth, is to be next to the Divinity.” — Byron's Diary.]

Where Cortes' and Pizarro's banner flew,
 The infant world redeems her name of "New."
 'Tis the old aspiration breathed afresh,
 To kindle souls within degraded flesh,
 Such as repulsed the Persian from the shore
 Where Greece was — No! she still is Greece once
 more.

One common cause makes myriads of one breast,
 Slaves of the east, or helots of the west;
 On Andes' and on Athos' peaks unfurled,
 The self-same standard streams o'er either world;
 The Athenian wears again Harmodius' sword;*
 The Chili chief abjures his foreign lord;
 The Spartan knows himself once more a Greek,
 Young Freedom plumes the crest of each cacique;
 Debating despots, hemmed on either shore,
 Shrink vainly from the roused Atlantic's roar;
 Through Calpe's strait the rolling tides advance,
 Sweep slightly by the half-tamed land of France,
 Dash o'er the old Spaniard's cradle, and would fain

Unite Ausonia to the mighty main:
 But driven from thence awhile, yet not for aye,
 Break o'er th' Ægean, mindful of the day
 Of Salamis! — there, there the waves arise,
 Not to be lulled by tyrant victories.

* [The famous hymn, ascribed to Callistratus:—

“Covered with myrtle-wreaths, I'll wear my sword
 Like brave Harmodius, and his patriot friend
 Aristogelton, who the laws restored,
 The tyrant slew, and bade oppression end,” etc., etc.]

Lone, lost, abandoned in their utmost need
By Christians, unto 'whom they gave their creed,
The desolated lands, the ravaged isle,
The fostered feud encouraged to beguile,
The aid evaded, and the cold delay,
Prolonged but in the hope to make a prey ; —
These, these shall tell the tale, and Greece can show
The false friend worse than the infuriate foe.
But this is well : Greeks only should free Greece,
Not the barbarian, with his mask of peace.
How should the autocrat of bondage be
The king of serfs, and set the nations free ?
Better still serve the haughty Mussulman,
Than swell the Cossaque's prowling caravan ;
Better still toil for masters, than await,
The slave of slaves, before a Russian gate, —
Numbered by hordes, a human capital,
A live estate, existing but for thrall,
Lotted by thousands, as a meet reward
For the first courtier in the Czar's regard ;
While their immediate owner never tastes
His sleep, sans dreaming of Siberia's wastes ;
Better succumb even to their own despair,
And drive the camel than purvey the bear.

VII.

But not alone within the hoariest clime
Where Freedom dates her birth with that of Time,
And not alone where, plunged in night, a crowd
Of Incas darken to a dubious cloud,

The dawn revives : renowned, romantic Spain
Holds back the invader from her soil again.
Not now the Roman tribe nor Punic horde
Demand her fields as lists to prove the sword ;
Not now the Vandal or the Visigoth
Pollute the plains, alike abhorring both ;
Nor old Pelayo on his mountain rears
The warlike fathers of a thousand years.
That seed is sown and reaped, as oft the Moor
Sighs to remember on his dusky shore.
Long in the peasant's song or poet's page
Has dwelt the memory of Abencerrage ;
The Zegri, and the captive victors, flung Back to the barbarous realm from whence they sprung.

But these are gone — their faith, their swords, their sway,

Yet left more anti-christian foes than they :
The bigot monarch and the butcher priest,
The Inquisition, with her burning feast,
The faith's red "auto," fed with human fuel,
While sate the catholic Moloch, calmly cruel,
Enjoying, with inexorable eye,
That fiery festival of agony !
The stern or feeble sovereign, one or both
By turns ; the haughtiness whose pride was sloth :
The long degenerate noble ; the debased
Hidalgo, and the peasant less disgraced,
But more degraded ; the unpeopled realm ;
The once proud navy which forgot the helm ;

The once impervious phalanx disarrayed ;
The idle forge that formed Toledo's blade ;
The foreign wealth that flowed on ev'ry shore,
Save hers who earned it with the natives' gore ;
The very language which might vie with Rome's,
And once was known to nations like their homes,
Neglected or forgotten : — such was Spain ;
But such she is not, nor shall be again.
These worst, these home invaders, felt and feel
The new Numantine soul of old Castile.
Up ! up again ! undaunted Tauridor !
The bull of Phalaris renews his roar ;
Mount, chivalrous Hidalgo ! not in vain
Revive the cry — “ Iago ! and close Spain ! ” *
Yes, close her with your armed bosoms round,
And form the barrier which Napoleon found, —
The exterminating war, the desert plain,
The streets without a tenant, save the slain ;
The wild sierra, with its wilder troop
Of vulture-plumed guerrillas, on the stoop
For their incessant prey ; the desperate wall
Of Saragossa, mightiest in her fall ;
The man nerved to a spirit, and the maid
Waving her more than Amazonian blade ;
The knife of Arragon, † Toledo's steel ;
The famous lance of chivalrous Castile ;

* [“ Santiago, y serra España ! ” the old Spanish war-cry.]

† The Arragonians are peculiarly dexterous in the use of this weapon, and displayed it particularly in former French wars.

The unerring rifle of the Catalan ;
The Andalusian courser in the van ;
The torch to make a Moscow of Madrid ;
And in each heart the spirit of the Cid : —
Such have been, such shall be, such are. Advance,
And win — not Spain, but thine own freedom, France !

VIII.

But lo ! a Congress ! * What ! that hallowed name
Which freed the Atlantic ? May we hope the same
For outworn Europe ? With the sound arise,
Like Samuel's shade to Saul's monarchic eyes,
The prophets of young Freedom, summoned far
From climes of Washington and Bolivar ;
Henry, the forest-born Demosthenes,
Whose thunder shook the Philip of the seas ;
And stoic Franklin's energetic shade,
Robed in the lightnings which his hand allayed ;
And Washington, the tyrant-tamer, wake,
To bid us blush for these old chains, or break.
But who compose this senate of the few
That should redeem the many ? Who renew
This consecrated name, till now assigned
To councils held to benefit mankind ?
Who now assemble at the holy call ?
The blest Alliance, which says three are all !

* [The Congress of the Sovereigns of Russia, Austria, Prussia, etc. etc. etc., which assembled at Verona, in the autumn of 1822.]

An earthly trinity ! which wears the shape
 Of heaven's, as man is mimicked by the ape.
 A pious unity ! in purpose one —
 To melt three fools to a Napoleon.
 Why, Egypt's gods were rational to these ;
 Their dogs and oxen knew their own degrees,
 And, quiet in their kennel or their shed,
 Cared little, so that they were duly fed ;
 But these, more hungry, must have something more,
 The power to bark and bite, to toss and gore,
 Ah ! how much happier were good Æsop's frogs
 Than we ! for ours are animated logs,
 With ponderous malice swaying to and fro,
 And crushing nations with a stupid blow ;
 All dully anxious to leave little work
 Unto the revolutionary stork.

 Honored by them, thy treacherous site forgets

Of the truth of Juliet's story, they seem tenacious to a degree, insisting on the fact — giving a date (1808), and showing a tomb.  The autocrat of waltzes and of war!
 As eager for a plaudit as a realm,
 And just as fit for flirting as the helm;

monuments of the Scaliger princes pleased me, but ‘a poor virtuoso am I.’ ” — Byron’s Letters, Nov. 1816.]

* [Cane I. Della Scala, surnamed the Great, died in 1329: he was the protector of Dante, who celebrated him as “il Gran Lombardo.”]

† [Claudian’s famous old man of Verona, “qui suburbium nunquam egressus est.”]

‡ [The Emperor Alexander; who died in 1825.]

A Calmuck beauty with a Cossack wit,
 And generous spirit, when 'tis not frost-bit ;
 Now half dissolving to a liberal thaw,
 But hardened back when'er the morning's raw ;
 With no objection to true liberty,
 Except that it would make the nations free.
 How well the imperial dandy prates of peace !
 How fain, if Greeks would be his slaves, free
 Greece !

How nobly gave he back the Poles their Diet,
 Then told pugnacious Poland to be quiet !
 How kindly would he send the mild Ukraine,
 With all her pleasant pulks, to lecture Spain !
 How royally show off in proud Madrid
 His goodly person, from the South long hid !
 A blessing cheaply purchased, the world knows,
 By having Muscovites for friends or foes.
 Proceed, thou namesake of great Philips's son !
 La Harpe, thine Aristotle, beckons on ;
 And that which Scythia was to him of yore
 Find with thy Scythians on Iberia's shore.
 Yet think upon, thou somewhat aged youth,
 Thy predecessor on the banks of Pruth ;
 Thou hast to aid thee, should his lot be thine,
 Many an old woman, but no Catherine.*
 Spain, too, hath rocks, and rivers, and defiles —
 The bear may rush into the lion's toils.

* The dexterity of Catherine extricated Peter (called the Great by courtesy), when surrounded by the Mussulmans on the banks of the river Pruth.

Fatal to Goths are Xeres' sunny fields ;
Think'st thou to thee Napoleon's victor yields?
Better reclaim thy deserts, turn thy swords
To ploughshares, shave and wash thy Bashkir hordes,
Redeem thy realms from slavery and the knout,
Than follow headlong in the fatal route,
To infest the clime whose skies and laws are pure
With thy foul legions. Spain wants no manure :
Her soil is fertile, but she feeds no foe ;
Her vultures, too, were gorged not long ago ;
And wouldst thou furnish them with fresher prey?
Alas ! thou wilt not conquer, but purvey.
I am Diogenes, though Russ and Hun
Stand between mine and many a myriad's sun ;
But were I not Diogenes, I'd wander
Rather a worm than such an Alexander !
Be slaves who will, the cynic shall be free ;
His tub hath tougher walls than Sinopè :
Still will he hold his lantern up to scan
The face of monarchs for an "honest man."

XL

And what doth Gaul, the all-prolific land
Of ne plus ultra ultras and their band
Of mercenaries? and her noisy chambers
And tribune, which each orator first clambers
Before he finds a voice, and when 't is found,
Hears "the lie" echo for his answer round?
Our British Commons sometimes deign to "hear!"
A Gallic senate hath more tongue than ear ;

Even Constant, their sole master of debate,
 Must fight next day his speech to vindicate.
 But this costs little to true Franks, who had rather Combat than listen, were it to their father.
 What is the simple standing of a shot,
 To listening long, and interrupting not?
 Though this was not the method of old Rome,
 When Tully fulminated o'er each vocal dome,
 Demosthenes has sanctioned the transaction,
 In saying eloquence meant "Action, action!"

XII.

But where's the monarch? hath he dined? or yet
 Groans beneath indigestion's heavy debt?
 Have revolutionary patés risen,
 And turned the royal entrails to a prison?
 Have discontented movements stirred the troops?
 Or have no movements followed traitorous soups?
 Have Carbonaro cooks not carbonadoed
 Each course enough? or doctors dire dissuaded
 Repletion? Ah! in thy dejected looks
 I read all France's treason in her cooks!
 Good classic Louis! is it, canst thou say,
 Desirable to be the "Desiré?"
 Why wouldst thou leave calm Hartwell's green abode,*
 Apician table, and Horatian ode,

* [Hartwell, in Buckinghamshire—the residence of Louis XVIII. during the latter years of the Emigration.]

To rule a people who will not be ruled,
And love much rather to be scourged than schooled?

Ah! thine was not the temper or the taste
For thrones; the table sees thee better placed:
A mild Epicurean, formed, at best,
To be a kind host and as good a guest,
To talk of letters, and to know by heart
One half the poet's, all the gourmand's art;
A scholar always, now and then a wit,
And gentle when digestion may permit;—
But not to govern lands enslaved or free;
The gout was martyrdom enough for thee.

XIII.

Shall noble Albion pass without a phrase
From a bold Briton in her wonted praise?
“Arts—arms—and George—and glory—and the isles—
And happy Britain—wealth—and Freedom's smiles—
White cliffs, that held invasion far aloof—
Contented subjects, all alike tax-proof—
Proud Wellington, with eagle beak so curled,
That nose, the hook where he suspends the world! *
And Waterloo—and trade—and——(hush! not yet
A syllable of imposts or of debt) ——

* “Naso suspendit adunco.” — Horace.

The Roman applies it to one who merely was imperious to his acquaintance.

And ne'er (enough) lamented Castlereagh,
 Whose penknife slit a goose-quill t' other day —
 And 'pilots who have weathered every storm' — *
 (But, no, not even for rhyme's sake, name Reform)."

These are the themes thus sung so oft before,
 Methinks we need not sing them any more ;
 Found in so many volumes far and near,
 There's no occasion you should find them here.
 Yet something may remain perchance to chime
 With reason, and, what's stranger still, with rhyme.
 Even this thy genius, Canning ! may permit,
 Who, bred a statesman, still wast born a wit,
 And never, even in that dull House, couldst tame
 To unleavened prose thine own poetic flame ;
 Our last, our best, our only orator,†
 Even I can praise thee — Tories do no more :
 Nay, not so much ; — they hate thee, man, because
 Thy spirit less upholds them than it awes.

* ["The Pilot that weathered the storm" is the burden of a song in honor of Pitt, by Canning.]

† ["I have never heard any one who fulfilled my ideal of an orator. Grattan would have been near it, but for his harlequin delivery. Pitt I never heard—Fox but once; and then he struck me as a debater, which to me seems as different from an orator as an improvisatore or a versifier from a poet. Grey is great, but it is not oratory. Canning is sometimes very like one. Whitbread was the Demosthenes of bad taste and vulgar vehemence, but strong, and English. Holland is impressive from sense and sincerity. Burdett is sweet and silvery as Belial himself, and, I think, the greatest favorite in Pandemonium." — Byron's Diary, 1821.]

The hounds will gather to their huntsman's hollo,
And where he leads the duteous pack will follow;
But not for love mistake their yelling cry;
Their yelp for game is not an eulogy;
Less faithful far than the four-footed pack,
A dubious scent would lure the bipeds back.
Thy saddle-girths are not yet quite secure,
Nor royal stallion's feet extremely sure;*
The unwieldy old white horse is apt at last
To stumble, kick, and now and then stick fast
With his great self and rider in the mud:
But what of that? the animal shows blood.

XIV.

Alas, the country! how shall tongue or pen
Bewail her now uncountry gentlemen?
The last to bid the cry of warfare cease,
The first to make a malady of peace.
For what were all these country patriots born?
To hunt, and vote, and raise the price of corn?
But corn, like every mortal thing, must fall,
Kings, conquerors, and markets most of all.

* [On the suicide of Lord Londonderry, in August, 1822, Mr. Canning, who had prepared to sail for India as Governor-General, was made Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs,—not much, it was alleged, to the personal satisfaction of George the Fourth, or of the high Tories in the cabinet. He lived to verify some of the predictions of the poet—to abandon the foreign policy of his predecessor—to break up the Tory party by a coalition with the Whigs—and to prepare the way for Reform in Parliament.]

And must ye fall with every ear of grain?
Why would you trouble Buonaparte's reign?
He was your great Triptolemus; his vices [prices;
Destroyed but realms, and still maintained your
He amplified to every lord's content
The grand agrarian alchymy, high rent.
Why did the tyrant stumble on the Tartars,
And lower wheat to such desponding quarters?
Why did you chain him on yon isle so lone?
The man was worth much more upon his throne.
True, blood and treasure boundlessly were spilt,
But what of that? the Gaul may bear the guilt;
But bread was high, the farmer paid his way,
And acres told upon the appointed day.
But where is now the goodly audit ale?
The purse-proud tenant, never known to fail?
The farm which never yet was left on hand?
The marsh reclaimed to most improving land?
The impatient hope of the expiring lease?
The doubling rental? What an evil's peace!
In vain the prize excites the ploughman's skill,
In vain the Commons pass their patriot bill;
The landed interest — (you may understand
The phrase much better leaving out the land) —
The land self-interest groans from shore to shore,
For fear that plenty should attain the poor.
Up, up again, ye rents! exalt your notes,
Or else the ministry will lose their votes,
And patriotism, so delicately nice,
Her loaves will lower to the market price;

For ah ! "the loaves and fishes," once so high,
Are gone — their oven closed, their ocean dry,
And nought remains of all the millions spent,
Excepting to grow moderate and content.
They who are not so, had their turn — and turn
About still flows from Fortune's equal urn ;
Now let their virtue be its own reward,
And share the blessings which themselves prepared.
See these inglorious Cincinnati swarm,
Farmers of war, dictators of the farm ;
Their ploughshare was the sword in hireling hands,
Their fields manured by gore of other lands ;
Safe in their barns, these Sabine tillers sent
Their brethren out to battle — why ? for rent !
Year after year they voted cent. per cent.,
Blood, sweat, and tear-wrung millions — why ? for rent !
They roared, they dined, they drank, they swore they meant
To die for England — why then live ? — for rent !
The peace has made one general malcontent
Of these high-market patriots ; war was rent !
Their love of country, millions all mis-spent,
How reconcile ? by reconciling rent !
And will they not repay the treasures lent ?
No : down with every thing, and up with rent !
Their good, ill, health, wealth, joy, or discontent,
Being, end, aim, religion — rent, rent, rent !
Thou sold'st thy birthright, Esau ! for a mess ;
Thou shouldst have gotten more, or eaten less ;

Now thou hast swilled thy pottage, thy demands
Are idle ; Israel says the bargain stands.
Such, landlords ! was your appetite for war,
And, gorged with blood, you grumble at a scar !
What ! would they spread their earthquake even o'er cash ?

And when land crumbles, bid firm paper crash ?
So rent may rise, bid bank and nation fall,
And found on 'Change a Fundling Hospital ?
Lo, Mother Church, while all religion writhes,
Like Niobe, weeps o'er her offspring, Tithes ;
The prelates go to — where the saints have gone,
And proud pluralities subside to one ;
Church, state, and faction wrestle in the dark,
Tossed by the deluge in their common ark.
Shorn of her bishops, banks, and dividends,
Another Babel soars — but Britain ends.
And why ? to pamper the self-seeking wants,
And prop the hill of these agrarian ants.
“ Go to these ants, thou sluggard, and be wise ; ”
Admire their patience through each sacrifice,
Till taught to feel the lesson of their pride,
The price of taxes and of homicide ;
Admire their justice, which would fain deny
The debt of nations : — pray who made it high ?

XV.

Or turn to sail between those shifting rocks,
The new Symplegades — the crushing Stocks,

Where Midas might again his wish behold
In real paper or imagined gold.
That magic palace of Alcina shows
More wealth than Britain ever had to lose,
Were all her atoms of unleavened ore,
And all her pebbles from Pactolus' shore.
There Fortune plays, while Rumor holds the stake,
And the world trembles to bid brokers break.
How rich is Britain ! not indeed in mines,
Or peace or plenty, corn or oil, or wines ;
No land of Canaan, full of milk and honey,
Nor (save in paper shekels) ready money :
But let us not to own the truth refuse,
Was ever Christian land so rich in Jews ?
Those parted with their teeth to good King John,
And now, ye kings ! they kindly draw your own ;
All states, all things, all sovereigns they control,
And waft a loan "from Indus to the pole."
The banker — broker — baron * — brethren, speed
To aid these bankrupt tyrants in their need.
Nor these alone ; Columbia feels no less
Fresh speculations follow each success ;
And philanthropic Israel deigns to drain
Her mild per-centage from exhausted Spain.
Not without Abraham's seed can Russia march ;
'T is gold, not steel, that rears the conqueror's arch.
Two Jews, a chosen people, can command
In every realm their scripture-promised land : —

* [Baron Rothschild.]

Two Jews keep down the Romans, and uphold
The accursed Hun, more brutal than of old :
Two Jews — but not Samaritans — direct
The world, with all the spirit of their sect.
What is the happiness of earth to them ?
A congress forms their “ New Jerusalem,”
Where baronies and orders both invite —
Oh, holy Abraham ! dost thou see the sight ?
Thy followers mingling with these royal swine,
Who spit not “ on their Jewish gaberdine,”
But honor them as portion of the show —
(Where now, oh pope ! is thy forsaken toe ?
Could it not favor Judah with some kicks ?
Or has it ceased to “ kick against the pricks ?”)
On Shylock’s shore behold them stand afresh,
To cut from nations’ hearts their “ pound of flesh.”

XVI.

Strange sight this Congress ! destined to unite
All that’s incongruous, all that’s opposite.
I speak not of the Sovereigns — they’re alike,
A common coin as ever mint could strike :
But those who sway the puppets, pull the strings,
Have more of motley than their heavy kings.
Jews, authors, generals, charlatans, combine,
While Europe wonders at the vast design :
There Metternich, power’s foremost parasite,
Cajoles ; there Wellington forgets to fight ;

There Chateaubriand forms new books of martyrs ; *
 And subtle Greeks † intrigue for stupid Tartars ;
 There Montmorenci, the sworn foe to charters, ‡
 Turns a diplomatist of great eclat,
 To furnish articles for the " Débats ;
 Of war so certain — yet not quite so sure
 As his dismissal in the " Moniteur."
 Alas ! how could his cabinet thus err ?
 Can peace be worth an ultra-minister ?
 He falls indeed, perhaps to rise again,
 " Almost as quickly as he conquered Spain." §

XVII.

Enough of this — a sight more mournful woos
 The averted eye of the reluctant muse.
 The imperial daughter, the imperial bride,
 The imperial victim — sacrifice to pride ;
 The mother of the hero's hope, the boy,
 The young Astyanax of modern Troy ;
 The still pale shadow of the loftiest queen
 That earth has yet to see, or e'er hath seen ;

* Monsieur Chateaubriand, who has not forgotten the author in the minister, received a handsome compliment at Verona from a literary sovereign: " Ah ! Monsieur C., are you related to that Chateaubriand who — who — who has written something ? " (écrit quelque chose !) It is said that the author of Atala repented him for a moment of his legitimacy.

† [Count Capo d'Istria — afterwards President of Greece. The Count was murdered, in September, 1831, by the brother and son of a Mainote chief whom he had imprisoned.]

‡ [The Duke de Montmorenci-Laval.]

§ [From Pope's verses on Lord Peterborough.]

She flits amidst the phantoms of the hour,
The theme of pity, and the wreck of power.
Oh, cruel mockery! Could not Austria spare
A daughter? What did France's widow there?
Her fitter place was by St. Helen's wave,
Her only throne is in Napoleon's grave.
But, no, — she still must hold a petty reign,
Flanked by her formidable chamberlain;
The martial Argus, whose not hundred eyes
Must watch her through these paltry pageantries.*
What though she share no more, and shared in vain,
A sway surpassing that of Charlemagne,
Which swept from Moscow to the southern seas!
Yet still she rules the pastoral realm of cheese,
Where Parma views the traveller resort
To note the trappings of her mimic court.
But she appears! Verona sees her shorn
Of all her beams — while nations gaze and mourn —
Ere yet her husband's ashes have had time
To chill in their inhospitable clime;
(If e'er those awful ashes can grow cold; —
But no, their embers soon will burst the mould;)
She comes! — the Andromache (but not Racine's, Nor Homer's,) — Lo! on Pyrrhus' arm she leans!
Yes! the right arm, yet red from Waterloo,
Which cut her lord's half-shattered sceptre through,
Is offered and accepted! Could a slave
Do more? or less? — and he in his new grave!

* [Count Neipperg, chamberlain and second husband to Maria-Louisa, had but one eye. The count died in 1831.]

Her eye, her cheek, betray no inward strife,
 And the ex-empress grow as ex a wife !
 So much for human ties in royal breasts !
 Why spare men's feelings, when their own are jests ?

XVIII.

But, tired of foreign follies, I turn home,
 And sketch the group — the picture's yet to come.
 My muse 'gan weep, but, ere a tear was spilt,
 She caught Sir William Curtis in a kilt !
 While thronged the chiefs of every Highland clan
 To hail their brother, Vich Ian Alderman !
 Guildhall grows Gael, and echoes with Erse roar,
 While all the Common Council cry "Claymore !"
 To see proud Albyn's tartans as a belt
 Gird the gross sirloin of a city Celt,*
 She burst into a laughter so extreme,
 That I awoke — and lo ! it was no dream !

Here, reader, will we pause : — if there's no harm in This first — you'll have, perhaps, a second "Carmen."

* [George the Fourth is said to have been somewhat annoyed, on entering the levee-room at Holyrood (Aug. 1822) in full Stuart tartan, to see only one figure similarly attired (and of similar bulk) — that of Sir William Curtis. The city knight had every thing complete — even the knife stuck in the garter. He asked the King, if he did not think him well dressed. "Yes !" replied his Majesty, "only you have no spoon in your hose." The devourer of turtle had a fine engraving executed of himself in his Celtic attire.]
